A Useful Root.
Magic $250.
Far Off China.
Uneven Prosperity.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1928.)

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, becoming less important and less accurate after 70, declares that accumulated money is the root of all evil.

WITHOUT accumulated money Niagara Falls wouldn't be harnessed, the Panama Canal, which helps Britain as much as it does us, wouldn't be dug; automobile production wouldn't be on a quantity basis and this country would have, perhaps 240,000 expensive automobiles, instead of 24,000,000 inexpensive automobiles.

GREAT accumulations of capital, like great accumulations of water going down hill, represent power.

Eliminate accumulated capital, and you would elimin: possibilities of higher civilization.

If the people haven't brains enough to watch and control accumulated capital they wouldn't have enough to control mall capital.

THERE is magic in the five words, "two hundred and fifty dollars." A college professor hired to deliver lectures praising the power companies, testifies that he got $250 for each lecture.

AND a lawyer of the earnest Ku Klux Klan hears that a distinguished United States Senator got $250 for each lecture attacking individuals distasteful to the Klan.

HOW little the average man knows or cares about far off China.

Tuan Chi-Lui is nearing Peking. Did you ever hear of him?

Marshal Chang Tso-Lin gives up hope before the advancing Japanese and other complications, and prepares to abandon Pekin, once China's mighty capital.

Is Chang Tso-Lin a definite person in your mind?

IN MAY various corporations declared dividends amounting to $347,900,405. And June's dividends will total $500,000,000. The country is prosperous. The task of intelligent men is to divide the prosperity more evenly.

MR. DURANT, who once owned control of General Motors, but doesn't own it now, returns from Europe, saying: "The biggest bull market ever seen will develop in two or three months. The big boom is yet to come."

Mr. Durant thinks brokers' loans will amount to ten billions and expects to see "ten-million-share days."

THAT may all be true, and none of it may be true. The wise man keeps out of gambling.

More important, and GENUINE news, is the fact that Henry Ford's army of employes last week numbered 115,431, highest total in his record. The total employment by all Detroit automobile makers was 259,073. That is REAL prosperity.

A DISTINGUISHED Chicago citizen, sometimes called "Scarface Al" Capone, well acquainted with the beer running business, has been retained by a respectable business firm. The firm says, "We are tired of being blown up at the request of rival firms and think Mr. Capone can stop that for us."

Sound judgment. They have not been blown up since they took Mr. Capone in partnership.

THE same thing happened nearly 500 years ago. On the left as you enter the Art Museum in Chicago stands the original Capone, Bartolommeo Coleoni, great gangster of his day, politely called "general." He gave his services to Venice and Milan, fought for and betrayed both cities and died generalissimo of the Venetian state, just before Columbus started to discover the United States.

CHICAGO citizens should see that statue of Coleoni, of which the original is in Venice. It is the greatest equestrian statue in the world. Capone ought to have a reproduction in his little home.

ATTACK ON LINDY SPLITS TOWN

AMARILLO, Tex., June 2.—(INS.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was the center of a storm of civic strife today that had this thriving town by the ears.

"Lindbergh has the swell head," said Editor Gene Howe in his newspaper. "Some of his elders should teach him some manners and courtesy."

"Treason!" replied a large section of the city's 25,000 population, including the local high school students, who long have admired the trans-Atlantic flier as an ideal.

The battle was on in full swing today, with Editor Howe standing by his guns, and the pro-Lindberghers threatening to boycott Howe's paper. Several mass meetings have been held.

"I have no apologies to make," said Howe. "I said Lindbergh had a swell head, and I meant just that. If he never returns to Amarillo that will be soon enough for me."

The controversy arose over an invitation which the city fathers telegraphed to Lindbergh at Wichita asking him to stop here on his way West. Lindbergh did not reply to the invitation, but in Wichita gave out a statement to the effect he would not stop at Amarillo, but would stop at Clovis, N. M.

Then without any notice, the Flying Colonel did swoop over the city, performed a few stunts and landed at the field. Nearly all Amarillo rushed to the flying field.

"These people," said Editor Howe, "flocked to the field because he himself had advertised his arrival. Then he proceeded to act bored and annoyed, and was almost insolent. If he didn't want people to know he was here he shouldn't have advertised his arrival and at least could have been courteous to those who approached him."

Then, continued the irate Texas editor, the Flying Colonel passed over Clovis, N. M., "a mile in the air," totally disregarding the thousands who had congregated there to see him as a result of his Wichita statement.

"Among those in the crowd were ranchers who had driven a hundred miles and wasted an entire day in order to see him," said Howe. "I said he had a swell head and I mean it. If that's treason make the most of it."

Italians Beat Air Record

ROME, June 2.—The Italian aviators, Majors Ferrarin and Del Prete surpassed the world's record for sustained flight today.

At midday they had been in the air more than an hour longer than George Haldeman and Eddie Stinson, who set a new record of 53 hours 36 minutes and 41 seconds last March in Florida.

May Delay Pacific Hop

HONOLULU, T. H., June 2.—(INS.)—Victors in their gruelling struggle against the perils of sea and air, the four courageous men, who comprise the crew of the monoplane Southern Cross, today stood on the threshold of an adventure, even more ambitious and daring than their 2,400-mile dash from the American mainland to Hawaii.

After a night of deep sleep, such as only those who give their utmost in energy and effort may know, the hardy fliers—Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith; Capt. C. T. P. Ulm, Harry W. Lyon and James Warner—prepared to leave their hotel and motor to Wheeler Army Air Field, where the giant craft which faithfully bore them over their long course awaited their scrutiny.

The first leg of their projected air expedition from America to Australia stamped with success, the valiant birdmen lost no time in turning their attention to plans for the consummation of the next step in their epic program, a flight from Hawaii to the distant Island of Suva in the Fiji group. This is the lap of their contemplated air journey to Australia fraught with the gravest dangers, covering, as it does, a distance of 3,139 miles over a single expanse of water.

MAY POSTPONE HOP

Although the airmen were scheduled to take off from Wheeler Field on a short flight to the Island of Kauai today, it was thought likely that they might postpone the hop for a few days. The plane, according to the plans of its crew, was to be shifted to the Barking Sands runway at Kauai today and there made ready for the hop to Suva, which was planned for tomorrow.

But Captain Kingsford-Smith, Australian war ace and commander of the expedition, announced that the plane would not be taken to Kauai until it had been inspected

Pilot's Own Story of Flight

By CHARLES KINGSFORD-SMITH,
Co-Pilot and Organizer of Southern Cross Trans-Pacific Flight.

(Copyright, 1928, by the San Francisco Printing Company and King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HONOLULU, June 2.—We had everything ready pretty well 24 hours before hand, as our usual policy is to be up-to-date. We started warming the motors up at 8:15 Thursday morning and took off at 8:45, or a minute or two either way.

The ship started to move forward all right and we got about 600 feet down the runway when the center motor quit, so I shut off the switch on the remaining two motors and investigated. It was only a very trifling thing, however, and we immediately rectified it, and without turning around to our original starting place, we opened up and took off from where we had stopped. This was from the Oakland airport.

We took off on account of the wind prevailing, although on the morning we took off there was very little wind of any description at all.

As is usual with a large machine heavily loaded, like the Southern Cross, considerable distance was run on the ground before she got into the air. It was about 2,800 feet, I think, before we cleared the end of the runway with 25 feet of altitude, and proceeded to climb toward Golden Gate, passing over the radio beacon at the Presidio and setting our course immediately for Honolulu.

The radio beacon functioned per-

SEEKING DIVORCES NOW

The careers of Mrs. Rose Aldinger (left), 304 Mayfield street, and Mrs. Marie R. Berkshire, 814 Anaheim street, are unique parallels. Reared together in West View, they were married at the same time. Recently Rose obtained a divorce. Now Marie seeks to free herself from R. L. Berkshire, and both women have charged desertion. In Common Pleas Court, Mrs. Aldinger testified for her friend.

90 QUIZZED IN RUM TRAFFIC PROBE

BULLETIN.

A perjury charge, growing out of his testimony before the Federal Grand Jury, now investigating the ramifications of the local booze ring, was filed today against Joseph Menczer, confectioner of Madison avenue, North Side. He was arrested in the Federal Building.

The charge was made by Joseph A. Frayne, assistant prohibition administrator. Bail was fixed at $5,000.

Menczer testified before the grand jury yesterday, and at the end of the day's session was told to return today. He was arrested when he did so.

Charges of perjury will be filed by government authorities within the next few days against a number of persons who have appeared as witnesses before the Federal grand jury, according to reports this morning in the Federal Building.

While no confirmation of the rumors could be obtained from Federal officials in back of the liquor probe, it is known that government attorneys are dissatisfied with the conduct of some of the grand jury witnesses. This was apparent from the fact that on many instances witnesses have been taken into the jury room several times, and between visits were left in rooms to "think it over."

Yesterday was a record day for the number of witnesses appearing before the inquisitors. During the three sesions 90 witnesses were heard, among them 35 prohibition agents. The latter are believed to have testified concerning raids on establishments used as distributing depots for moonshine whisky. The others were persons summoned from the "Strip" and East End wards. The jury held three sessions, the night session continuing until after 10 o'clock.

That many persons anticipate being among those against whom the grand jury will return true bills, was indicated by the fact that attorneys, representing them, have made inquiries of government attorneys as to the amount of bond in case of arrests. It also was said that bonding companies are preparing to take care of many of those who may be indicted.

The grand jury will remain in session today until 4 p. m.

CRISIS GRIPS CHINA AS PEKIN FALL NEARS

TOKIO, June 2.—(AP.)—A dispatch from Pekin today to Rengo, a Japanese news agency, said foreign garrisons and legations were preparing for emergencies while the capital of North China awaited evacuation by Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, for nearly two years dictator of the North.

Martial law was proclaimed. Police and Gendarmes were patrolling the streets. All persons abroad after sunset were being questioned.

The Japanese war office expected that Chang, who once was credited with desiring to make himself emperor of China and was formerly the most powerful war lord in China, would go to Mukden soon. The power which he assumed in his career from bandit to dictator has slipped from his grasp.

The war office did not think that the Nationalist troops that were expected to take over Pekin would

Cub Pilot Fined $100

NEW YORK, June 2.—(AP.)—Joe McCarthy, manager of the Chicago Cubs, has been fined $100 for abuse of Umpire "Dolly" Stark during the game with the Pirates at Pittsburgh yesterday, President Heydler, of the National League, announced today.

No suspension is involved in McCarthy's punishment, President Heydler said, pointing out it was the Cub pilot's first offense of the season.

McCarthy was ejected from the game after a dispute with Stark over a decision at third base in the fourth inning, when the Pirates staged a rally that drove Sheriff Blake, Cub pitching ace, from the box and helped them win the game by a score of 10 to 4.

The Pirates are leaving tonight for the East, but are they depart they would like to take another sock at the pesky Cubs who will tangle with the home boys this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Pirates are slated to play the Dodgers in Brooklyn Sunday, the contest to be the first of the Eastern invasion.

Encouraged over their play of the past two days, which brought two triumphs, the Bushwhackers will go after the Bears hammer and tongs in the second fight of the two-game series. The play of Pete Scott, Dick Bartell and Lloyd Waner sparkled yesterday as Burleigh Grimes pitched a six-hit game.

John Miljus and Fred Fussell are slab choices for this afternoon from the Pittsburgh side. The Cubs are expected to use Art Nehf on the mound.

MASKED MEN HOLD UP TWO OFFICES

Two officers were held up by three bandits shortly before noon today and $2,000 obtained.

At the office of the Pennsylvania Builders' Company, 1203 West Liberty avenue, three men, masked, and with revolvers, obtained $1,700, the payroll from Treasurer J. J. Dianny.

At the Iron City Elevator Company, 1227 West Carson street, the holdup men obtained $300, and some checks, but missed the payroll.

James J. Elanny, 1133 Piermont avenue, [illegible]nt, secretary-treasurer of the Pennsylvania Builders' Supply Company, who was held up and robbed of a leather bag containing the weekly payroll, said the robbery was the most nervy and quickly managed hold-up he ever heard of.

"I had just stepped out of my machine in the driveway near the office," Elanny said, "and turned into West Liberty avenue, in front of the office, when the bandit stepped up to me, shoved a gun in my face and grabbed the bag, telling me to get out of sight, quick.

Another bandit stood about 15 feet away and two more were in a sedan automobile parked directly in fronto f our large office window, in plain view of several clerks in the office."

Elanny said he had obtained the payroll money, in denominations of $20, $10, $5 and $1 bills, and some silver, at the Keystone National Bank, in Fourth avenue. He drove over the Liberty bridge, through the tunnel, and saw nothing exceptional until the bandit shoved the gun in his face.

Elanny described the bandit who held him up as about 37 or 30 years old, of light complexion, weighing about 170 or 180 pounds. He wore a cap and dark suit and had a handkerchief tied around his neck, under his chin.

Clarence O'Brien, chauffeur for the Elevator company, returned from the bank shortly after 11 o'clock today and three men, who had evidently followed him entered.

As J. R. Jamison, clerk, passed over a pouch containing $300 cash sales and some checks to be taken to the bank, the three bandits shouted "Back up," and covered the three men in the office. O'Brien, Jamison, and T. H. Miller with revolvers.

Jamison did not comply quick enough and was struck on the jaw with the butt of a revolver. Then he was forced into a rear room.

O'Brien battled with the other bandit and attempted to retain the pouch in which the money and checks for deposit had been placed. He lost out in the battle and then the three men fled.

They made no effort to take anything from the office safe. The payroll, which the bandits evidently thought O'Brien had obtained at the bank on his first trip had been delivered direct from the main office of the company.

HOPE FOR ITALIA WANES IN RESCUERS

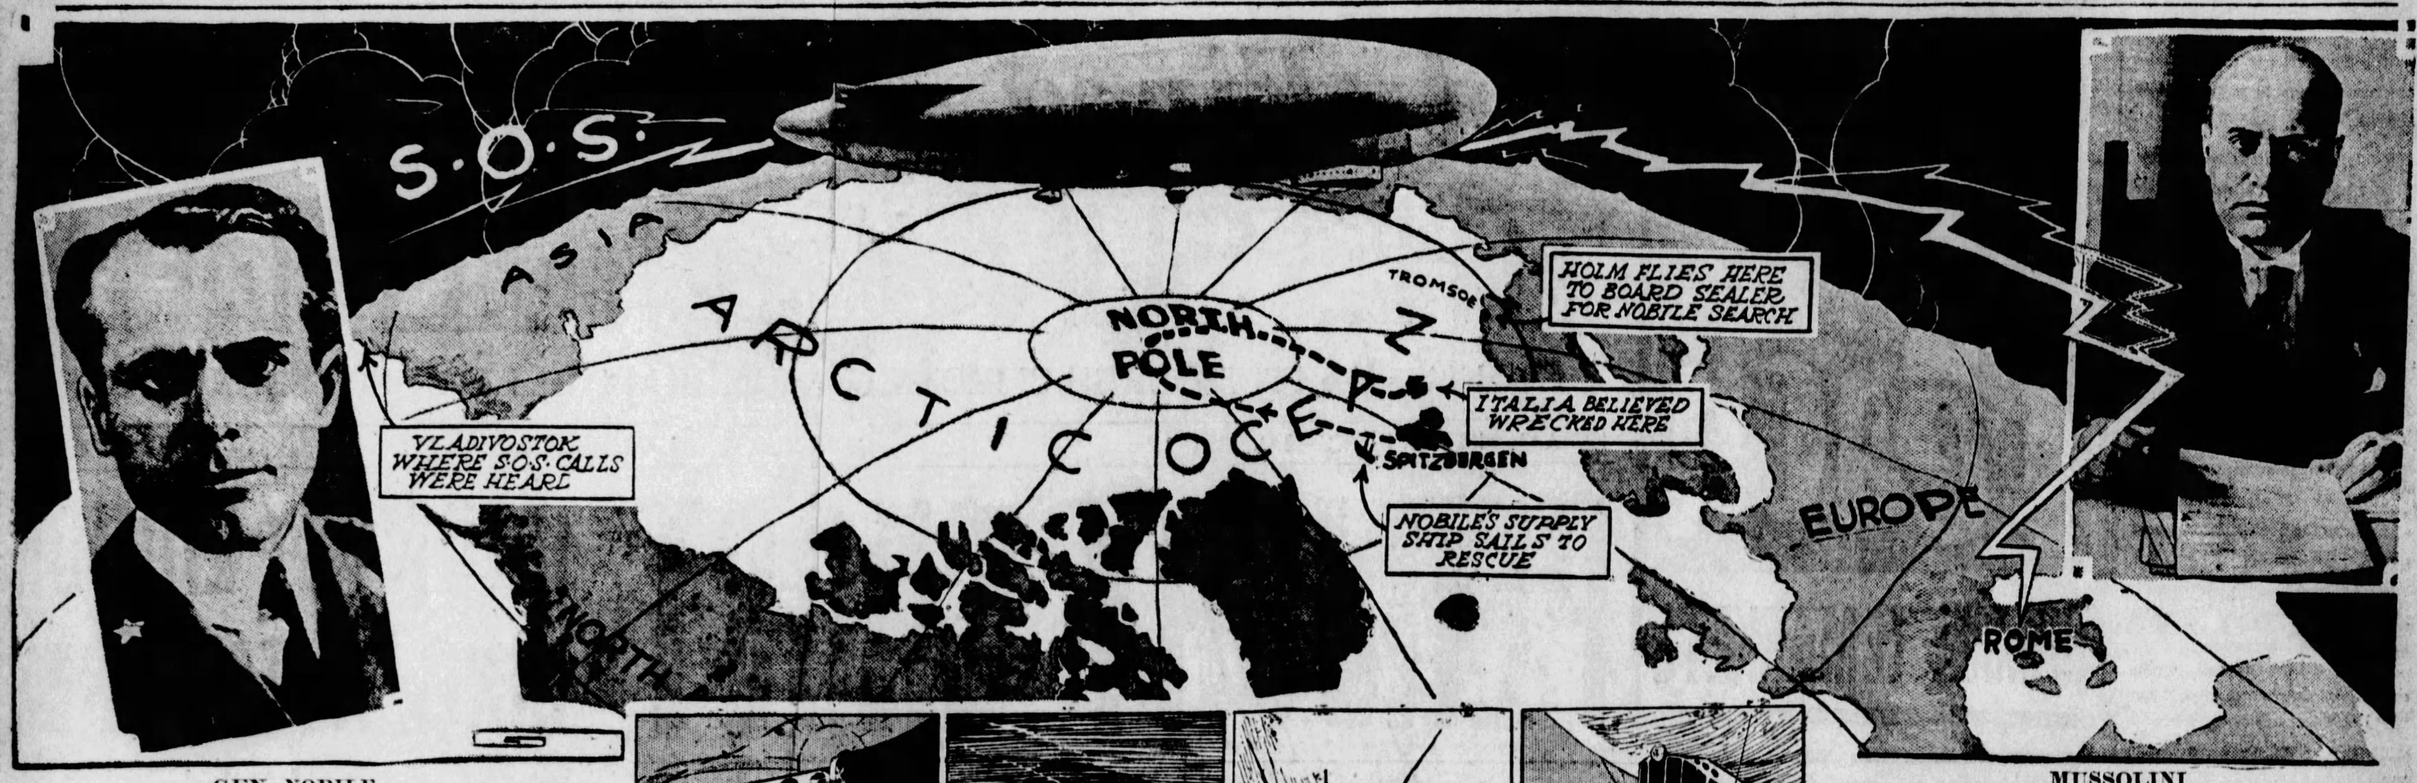
DIRIGIBLE LOST IN ARCTIC REGION

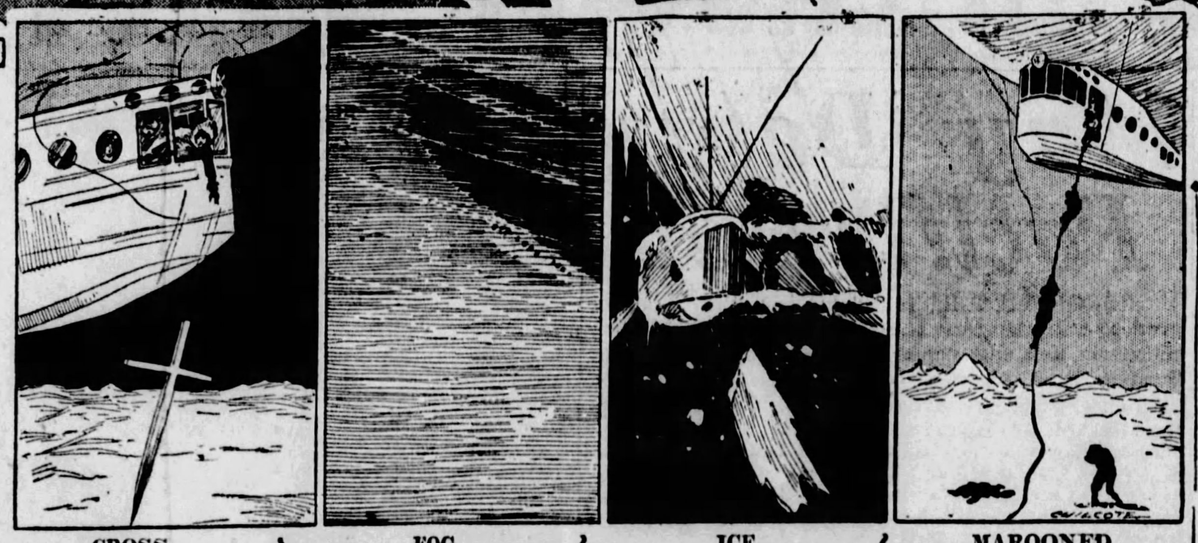


GEN. NOBILE

Although its fate is still in doubt, hope for the safety of the Italia and its crew wanes. Gen. Umberto Nobile heads the expedition of 15 men. The huge dirigible, exploring the Arctic regions, passed from sight on its last flight.

MUSSOLINI

Premier Mussolini, Italy's ruler, anxiously awaits word from the Italia. As is all Italy, Il Duce is deeply interested in Nobile's scientific explorations. Above also is a map of the region over which the Italia flew and in which it has now passed from sight, perhaps forever.



CROSS

In flying over the North Pole, Gen. Nobile dropped a wooden cross, gift from the Pope.

FOG

From messages sent back on the trip on which the ship disappeared, it is known the Italia battled fog.

ICE

Large piece of ice breaking from the great bag endangered the tiny gondolas swung from its sides.

MAROONED

Members of the crew, if they live, face Arctic rigors without complete preparation.

Bishop

DR. H. M. WELCH

Dr. Herbert M. Welch, Seoul, Korea, appointed bishop of the Pittsburgh area, Methodist Episcopal Church, will arrive here Wednesday for a two-day conference prior to his permanent residence in this city. Dr. Welch was formerly president of Ohio Wesleyan College and before that was pastor in Middleton, Conn. He has been stationed in Korea for 12 years.

HONOR PAID TO DEAD PILOT

The body of Lieut. Paul Evert, of Langley Field, Va., who was killed when lightning struck his balloon Wednesday in the National Balloon Elimination race, was shipped to Washington yesterday. The bodys is to be interred today in Arlington Cemetery. An escort of soldiers of the One Hundred and Tenth Infantry accompanied the body from Greensburg to the Pennsylvania Railroad Station.

A coroner's inquest was held yesterday at Greensburg to determine the cause of the balloonist's death. A verdict of accidental death was returned after one witness had been called.

The body of W. W. Morton, the other victim of the electrical storm that struck the balloons a short time after they left Bettis Field, is in Akron, O., awaiting buriel today. Ward T. Van Orman and James F. Cooper, injured when their balloons were wrecked by the storm, are reported improved.

NEVER LOST COURSE, PACIFIC FLIER TELLS

fectly. I think for about three or four hours we lost it, but having Lyon and Warner with us that didn't bother us at all. Capt. Lyon is a magnificent navigator and Warner a wonderful radio man.

We held our course perfectly throughout. At no time were we out of communication with either ship or shore station.

The weather was good all through the day, with the exception of a few low clouds screening the surface of the water, which made it impossible to take drift readings. However, after nightfall, we made some altitude and other checking up with the positions of different ships, and Capt. Lyon's dead reckoning navigation kept us on our true course.

IN RAIN SQUALLS

We ran through a couple of light rain squalls and some fairly heavy clouds and had to fly blind for two or three short periods. During the night we sighted three ships and they signaled us with searchlights. We signalled back with searchlights that we carried and a radio check was also made as to our position.

The night was very cold and we were very glad of our fur-lined flying clothes. Ulm and myself in the front seat were particularly so.

We finally saw the first streaks of dawn behind us at 4:40 a. m. (ship's time). From then on, further radio communication and position sights by Lyon held us steadily on our course. Clouds continued until 200 or 300 miles from the Hawaiian Islands, when we ran into a pretty clear sky. About 150 miles or more before coming in sight of the islands we sighted numerous low cloud banks which could be easily mistaken for land. Capt. Lyon, however, who has spent a number of years in this vicinity, warned us about the likelihood of being deceived by these, and aside from altering our course slightly to confirm that they were merely clouds, we held a steady line to within 60 or 70 miles of Honolulu.

The first actual land sighted by Capt. Lyon was Maunakea, a large black head of land which lay to the south over the top of the fog and mist. Capt. Lyon, although familiar with the islands from the sea, desired a check be made on this point, not having seen it from the air before. We accordingly diverted south for perhaps 40 miles and found that he had held his original course perfectly. We lost altitude and came below the fog directly opposite the Island of Oahu and the fleet across Diamond Head and were met by numerous Army and Navy airships and flying boats.

I did not know the location of Wheeler Field, but the service machines very kindly led us to it. We landed at 9:50 (Honolulu time) and to our astonishment had a magnificent reception from 15,000 people. Am very glad to be down.

Early discomforts during the flight was some cold and extreme deafness. My personal opinion from this flight, as to the value of radio, is that in the future flying will depend more on radio than anything else. I have heard it said, and I believe it to be true, that our radio equipment is the best in the air. Despite the noise from our whirlwind motors, Warner was able to maintain two-way communication throughout the flight. We had both short and long wave transmission and receiving sets.

I thank everybody very much indeed for the wonderful reception we have had and I feel that the rest of the trip is going to be just as successwul as this part has been.

The next stage is the longest trip ever taken across water, but we have this advantage that we pass over two or three groups of islands as a check on our navigation.

I can't say at this time just when I will hop for Suva but will do so probably as soon as favorable weather conditions prevail and when we have rested from our hop from San Francisco to Honolulu.

MAY POSTPONE FLIGHT

and found to be in proper condition. Because of the intense strain to which it was subjected during the 27-hour trans-Pacific flight, it was thought that time will have to be allowed for some adjustments before the hop to Kauai can be made.

Doubt was voiced by aviators here, acquainted with the nature of Barking Sands runway, as to the ability of the Southern Cross to lift its great weight off the ground there, although the fliers scrupulously avoided an opinion on this matter until they had inspected both the plane and the runway. It was pointed out that previous attempts to take off from Barking Sands with planes, lighter than the Southern Cross, had not met with success.

CROWDS GREET FLIERS

In accordance with their expressed desires, the fliers were taken to their hotel here a few minutes after their historic arrival at Wheeler Field to the accompaniment of ear-splitting cheers from the throats of thousands who had spent an anxious three hours waiting to sight the great silver air steed. The ceremonies at the field were brief and the crowds, who surged forward to greet the Australian ace and his mates were restrained in orderly fashion by military guards.

Arriving at their hotel, the fliers retired for a much-needed sleep. They slept all afternoon, closely guarded against intrusion. Last night they were guests of honor at a private dinner. Although flooded with invitations to public functions, they declined them on account of their wish to get as much rest as possible before their takeoff for Suva.

Although they had alarmed the world during the last hours of their flight by sending forth a message that they had only four hours' supply of gasoline left, the fliers discovered, after their landing, that 130 gallons of fuel remained in their tanks. Capt. Kingsford-Smith declared that some 500 gallons of gasoline is all that will be required in addition to the supply now in the tanks, for the flight to Suva.

Hotel Fire Routs 40 Guests

POTTSVILLE, Pa., June 2.—(AP.)—Forty guests escaped from the Venice Hotel here early today when fire swept the building.

Police helped one guest out after he had been overcome in attempting to rescue personal effects.

Several firemen collapsed while fighting the fire, but were revived and returned to their task.

The fire started in the basement of an adjacent paint store. Firemen succeeded in preventing the spread of the flames from the hotel building.

All the floors of the hotel were badly damaged.

The hostelry was owned and operated by John Comminetti, of Pottsville. It is an old structure at the corner of Center and Minersville streets.

MAIL CLERK PAROLED IN THEFT OF 3 SHIRTS

William C. Grush, North Side, a former railway mail clerk, was placed on parole for two years in Federal Court yesterday, when he pleaded guilty to stealing three shirts from a parcel post package. Since his arrest last August he suffered loss of his right leg in an accident while hunting near Conneaut Lake.

WALL ST. IS OPPOSING HOOVER —STRAUSS

NEW YORK, June 2.—(AP.)—The general sentiment in Wall street is against the nomination of Herbert Hoover, Lewis F. Strauss, of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., testified today before the Senate presidential campaign investigating committee.

Strauss, a former secretary to Hoover, made this statement when he was asked if his firm had made any contribution to the Hoover-for-President fund. While his own banking house gave no money, Strauss said he personally had raised around $30,000 for the Commerce Secretary's campaign fund.

He said Julius Rosenwald, chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck & Co. had contributed $10,000; Henry I. Moses, a New York attorney, $2,500 and V. E. Macy, of New York, $2,000.

Strauss told the committee he had sent some of the money to the Washington Hoover headquarters and that he still had some on hand. He was directed to furnish a complete list of contributions and expenditures.

WAITING FOR NOMINATION

Mayor Frank J. Hague of Jersey City, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, testified that he had formed a club of 75,000 Smith supporters in his state. He added that the expenses of the club would not exceed $700.

"The campaign is practically at a standstill," he said. "Nothing will be done until after the convention."

"Do you know of any money being raised in Jersey City or New York to be sent into other states?"

"Never heard of it," Hague said.

Asked if he knew of any receipts or expenditures, Hague said he had received nothing. He also said he knew of no other expenditures beyond the $700 of the Smith Club and that he had sent no money into North Carolina.

Mayor Hague declared that the charges that he would pay the expenses of the New Jersey delegation to the Houston convention were absolutely untrue.

attempt to pursue Chang into Manchuria.

The present foreign forces at Pekin and Tientsin were believed to be adequate for the protection of the various nations. Japan was not expected to send additional troops.

It was thought that no serious incidents would follow the evacuation of Pekin except in the outlying districts and these would not affect foreigners.

A message in code from the Associated Press correspondent in Pekin said the strictest censorship prevailed.

PEKIN, June 2.—(AP.)—Reports were current today that Mukden troops of the Northern Alliance had been defeated at Liuliho, 35 miles south of Pekin with 4,000 casualties.

The defeat was the result of severe fighting between the northern troops and Shansi province troops, which are allied with the Nationalists.

Because of the difficulty of withdrawing the main force of the Mukden troops except at the expense of their allies from the Chihli and Shantung provinces, Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, northern dictator, was reported to have postponed his departure for Manchuria. He was said to have ordered General Tsung Chang, chief northern commander in the field, to do his utmost to halt the Nationalists in their advance.

COUNTY OFFICERS TAKE MOONSHINING SUSPECT

Charged with illegal possession of liquor, Max Rundich, of West Deer township, will be arraigned before Justice of the Peace J. A. Hernon, of Sharpsburg, Monday. INDICTED WITH SIX OTHERS

CHICAGO, June 2.—(AP.)—Charles S. Wharton who, as a former Congressman, helped make laws and as a former assistant state attorney helped enforce them, has been indicted with six others on charges of robbing the United States mails.

The indictment, which came from the Federal Grand Jury yesterday, is the result of investigation into the $133,000 train robbery at Evergreen Park a suburb last February.

Thirty government agents have been engaged in building the case against the men under indictment.

They are, besides Wharton: Charles (Limpy) Cleaver, alleged leader; William Donovan, Frank Meccia, Lawrence O'Brien, Virgil Litsinger and John Flannery. The latter two are at large.

Flannery two years ago was sentenced to be hanged with Henry Fernekes, the midget bandit, but won freedom at a second trial.

Wharton, who is one of the city's well known criminal lawyers, was expected to surrender today. Bond already has been fixed at $10,000 for him and at $100,000 for the others.

"If robbing the mails was'nt a serious crime, this indictment would be silly," he said. "I know nothing about the case except what I have read in the newspapers. I have defended Cleaver on four different occasions, but he is the only one of those indicted I ever saw.

SAM JAWARSKI TO BE RE-TRIED

Sam Jawarski, or Pallas, alleged member of the "Flathead Mob" and convicted on seven counts for aiding his brother Paul and Jack Vasbinder, convicted murderers, to shoot their way out of the county jail last August 18, was granted a new trial yesterday by Judge Ambrose B. Reid.

Argument was based on the admission as evidence of a photograph of a letter alleged to have been written by Sam Jawarski to a friend in South America relating plans for the jail delivery. The original letter was not produced. First Assistant District Attorney Andrew T. Park and Attorney W. F. Daniels were opposing counsel.

The city, starting its program of reclaiming Frick's Woods, awarded to the people of Pittsburgh in the will of Henry C. Frick, has completed a bypath from Beechwood boulevard through the little forest to where Forbes street spans Fern Hollow. Here's a bit of sylvan beauty along the path.

NATURE

Nature's at her best in Frick's Woods—the people in the East End call it Sterrett Woods, sometimes. Here's a peek through the trees at the bridge which carries Forbes street over Fern Hollow. In the future, the city plans, Frick's Woods will become one of the city's finished parks.

Business Writer Joins Sun-Telegraph Staff

GEORGE H. SNYDER, who has been manager of the Pittsburgh Bureau of the Wall Street Journal, has resigned to become a special writer of business and industrial news for the Sun-Telegraph.

Mr. Snyder's first article on Pittsburgh's commercial developments appeared yesterday and will be a daily feature.

Mr. Snyder has been on the staff of the Wall Street Journal for seven years, during which time he has worked in New York, Chicago and Pittsburgh, securing a wide acquaintance among bankers and business leaders, whose views on economic questions he will bring to Sun-Telegraph readers.

H. L TRUBY FALLS DEAD IN OFFICE IN DORMONT

Apoplexy caused the death of Harry L. Truby, 50, real estate dealer, in his office at Glenmore and Potomac avenues, Dormont, last night. He had just completed a telephone call when stricken. Mr. Truby resided at 2860 Glenmore avenue, Dormont.

EDITOR AT SOMERSET VICTIM OF PARALYSIS

SOMERSET, Pa., June 2.—Edward H. Werner, 68, editor of the Somerset Democrat, was stricken with paralysis yesterday and is in a serious condition.

W. Virginia Muddles Vote

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 2.—(AP.)—With the vote tally practically complete, most West Virginia delegates to the national conventions of the Democratic and Republican parties, on pre-primary pledges are in direct opposition to the people's preference.

Of the 19 Kansas City convention votes, none is pledged directly to Senator Guy D. Goff, who won the preferential vote; two are regarded as for Hoover, one is pledged to Hoover and the remaining 16 are unpledged.

In the Democratic convention of the 20 delegates having 16 votes, 14 are anti-Smith; five are pledged to the New York Governor, and one is undesignated. Smith was returned the winner in the direct vote.

The delegates are not bound by the preferential vote.

As the result of the primary, Dr. Henry D. Hatfield (Rep.), will oppose Senator M. M. Neeley (Dem.), incumbent, in November.

In the gubernatorial race J. Alfred Taylor (Dem.), will stack up against W. G. Conley, who won the Republican nomination.

The latest presidential preference figures today were:

Democratic, 2,063 of 2,306 precincts gave Smith 78,560; Reed, 69,688.

Republican, 2,170 precincts gave Goff 120,337; Hoover, 105,876.

VICTIM OF POISON DIES: FIND NO SUICIDE CAUSE

Andrew Freehuf, 44, of 1102 Galveston avenue, North Side, died early today at Allegheny General Hospital of poison swallowed several hours earlier at his home. Death was reported to the corner as suicide, although no reason was advanced for the man's actions.

WOMAN SLIPS; HURT BY TRUCK

Mrs. Margaret Dennenfels, 60, of 201 Stratford avenue, suffered two mangled legs and a crushed arm today, when she was run over by a truck of the Iron City Sand and Gravel Company at Penn avenue and St. Clair street. At the West Penn Hospital her condition was reported as serious. Police said Mrs. Dennenfels had slipped on the wet street and fallen beneath the wheels of the truck. The driver, Ralph Becker, 22, was arrested on a reckless driving charge.

FRANKLIN & MARSHALL GETS NEW SCIENCE HALL

LANCASTER, Pa., June 2.—(AP.)—A new science building, to cost probably $100,000, has been presented to Franklin and Marshall College by Dr. B. F. Fackenthal, Jr., president of the board of trustees of the college, it was announced yesterday at the annual meeting of the board. Dr. Fackenthal is a banker and business man of Riegelsville. Dr. Theodore B. Appel, state secretary of health, and J. William Bowman of Harrisburg, were elected members of the board of trustees. Dr. Appel represents the athletic committee on the board.

MAY HUNT NOBILE ON SKIIS

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, June 2.—(AP.)—Firm in the belief that the dirigible Italia crashed among the mountains and glaciers of Northern Spitzbergen, Italian Alpine troops today were eager to start for the North on skiis in the hope of finding the crew of the airship, dead or alive.

Members of the base crew based their belief on the known wind direction on the morning of May 25, when the last radio message was received from the Italia. They estimated that the airship crashed between Wood Bay and Wijde Fjord in the neighborhood of Hinlopen Strait. Hinlopen Strait separates the Island of West Spitzbergen from North East Land, and this vicinity has been suggested by experts as a likely place to seek the Italia. It was calculated that the catastrophe occurred not further north than between 79 and 80 degrees and not further east than the eighteenth meridian.

FEAR CRASH ON PEAK

If the airship crashed into one of the numerous mountain peaks in the prevailing fog, a belief which persists, it was thought that there was scant possibility of the crew being found alive.

Commandant Romagna, in command of the Citta Di Milano, was not enthusiastic over the desire of the troops to seek the Italia on skiis. Capt. Sora of the Alpinists, however, was eager to lead his men in the hazardous undertaking.

The men themselves realized that the route was more dangerous than usual because the spring sunshine has begun to melt the snow on the glaciers and open up deep cracks.

They hoped, however, to be ordered to proceed northward early next week. The expedition would consist of seven or eight Alpinists led by a guide from Kings Bay. It would take enough food to last three or four weeks and have a dog team, guns, axes and medical supplies.

It was supposed that the party, if ordered out, would start overland at the same time that the Citta Di Milano, the sealer Hobby, and the ice breaker Braganza go north by sea. Lieut Luetzow-Holm, who is aboard the Hobby, will make the first search for the Italia by air with a Norwegian seaplane.

In the meantime another searching party consisting of four Alpinists was proceeding across the snow and ice of the north visiting the shelters in the hope of learning the fate of their compatriots.

FIRE ESCAPE PROWLER, FIRED UPON, ESCAPES

Search is being made today by police for a Negro prowler who probably was wounded late last night when he attempted to force entrance to the home of G. F. Glass, of 5932 Elwood street. The prowler had gone up a fire escape to a second story window when discovered by Glass, who fired several times. The Negro fled. Glass told detectives that the fugitive wore a chauffeur's uniform and that an automobile was heard to start as the man disappeared.

GIANT PLANE FIFTH TO CONQUER FIRST LAP OF PACIFIC

Once again, the Pacific Ocean, from California to Hawaii, has been crossed by air. The Southern Cross, tri-motored Fokker in the air 27 hours, 28 minutes and for a time lost as it neared its goal, landed at Honolulu, 2,400 miles from Oakland, its starting point, on the first leg of a 7,788-mile trip to Sydney, Australia. Four men, Capt. Kingsford Smith and Capt. C. T. P. Ulm, Australians, and Capt. H. W. Lyon and James W. Warner, Americans, are making the trip.

Clara Bow Finds Sleeveless Gown and Slippers Poor Attire For Hiking About California

By DOROTHY HERZOG

(Copyright, 1928, Premier Syndicate.)

LOS ANGELES, June 2.

CLARA BOW piles soap box upon soap box and, climbing to the proper broadcasting heights, announces she is henceforth and for always through hiking. 'Pears that one of Clara's boy friends—name cloaked in deepest secret—suggested they go hiking. Clara agreed, even though the bunion sport is out of her ken. Came the appointed hour. The boy friend telephoned to say he was tied up in a conference and would be unable to keep the date. Clara decides she should do a solo hike. She instructed her chauffeur to drive into Laurel Canyon and select a spot that would give her 30 minutes of nature imbibing.

He did. He did more. He instructed Clara carefully where he and the car would await her. That was about 3 o'clock. At 6, the chauffeur was roaming the hills frantically yelling: "Miss Bow-w-w-w—Miss Bow-w-w-w!" At last, Clara put in an appearance, a very bedraggled appearance. But an appearance all the same. Instead of sturdy boots she had worn slippers and socks. Instead of a sweater, a cool, sleeveless affair. What the brambles, et cetera, did to her was a sight to cheer any hospital. Oh, yes, Clara is through with the bunion sport.

Real estate item: Bebe Daniels is the plutocratic owner of five beaucoup valuable beach houses. All of them are leased. The Irving Berlins, I believe, have taken one for the season. Inasmuch as summer, according to the calendar, is galloping upon us all speed ahead, Bebe decided she should move to the beach herself. So she rented a place until fall.

There's a lad living in the same apartment house as ye scribe that answers to the name of Folkedal. He's Norwegian, with nice features, curly blond hair and scads of money. He has four cars—a Lancia, a Packard, a Locomobile, and a Lincoln. The first named sports a Norwegian license. Folkedal came to Hollywood to look the burg over and stayed to arrange plans for a shipping business. The other day he heard that Erich Von Stroheim was going to make a flicker that would require German officers in it. Folkedal served as an Austrian officer during the World War and still has his uniform packed in one of his numerous trunks. He's determined to meet Von Stroheim now and try to corral a German officer role in the picture.

If I knew more of the shipping business and less of the movies, I might be able to point out a moral in the style of George Ade. Fortunately I don't. Be an artist and draw your own.

Gilbert Roland is so pleased with the close-cropped head he had to have for "The Woman Disputed" that he intends keeping his abundant locks shorn. FREE ELEPHANT SHOW KENNYWOOD FEATURE

John Robinson's Military Elephants, playing a two-week's engagement in Kennywood Park, are a special free attraction. Another new attraction are three baby Sun bears, established in a specially constructed natural cage. With the monkeys, they provide fun for both children and adults. The big pool is now open. Paul Dillman and his North Side Chamber of Commerce Band will be present for four concerts Sunday. Picnicking at the park today are the North Braddock and the Braddock township schools.

STEAMER HOMER SMITH LISTS SUNDAY TRIPS

The excursion steamer Homer Smith is to make a Sunday afternoon trip which provides an opportunity for school children as well as grownups to view the government dam at Emsworth, in addition to industries on both sides of the Ohio River. The boat leaves the foot of Smithfield street at 2:30 o'clock and returns at 6 o'clock. The departure both Saturday and Sunday nights is at 8:30, returning at 11:30 o'clock. Capt. Homer Smith is booking special all-day trips as far as Rock Springs, Chester, W. Va.

THEATER BILLS NEXT WEEK

The Nixon Players will present "The Last Warning" in the Nixon for a week, beginning June 4, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday. It is a mystery comedy drama.

One scene in "Why Men Leave Home," the farce comedy to be presented by the George Sharp Players in the Pitt next week, calls for the three leading women players to don pajamas. Anne Forrest, Mabel Kroman and Brown Mehard are the players.

In addition to being dancers, the girls in Lottie Mayer's Ballet announced as the headline attraction in the Keith-Albee program in the Davis next week are swimmers and divers. In the finale of the act the girls disappear into a huge tank of water and remain for a long period, thus mystifying the audience.

Ramon Novarro, the hero of "Ben Hur" and "The Student Prince" offers his newest starring vehicle, "Across to Singapore," as the screen feature in the Penn next week. It is an adaptation of the Ben Ames Williams story, "All the Brothers Were Valiant," and has such noted players as Ernest Torrence, Joan Crawford and others in the cast.

Julia Gerity, delineator of "Blues;" Mignonette, opera singer, and Maryl Sisters, singers, will be in the Stanley next week. In addition to the stage attraction there will be a photodrama and other films.

At the top of the new vaudeville bill in the Aldine next week are Marty Collins and Harry Peterson, the "two wise guys," and a song and dance revue headed by Amelia Allen. The screen attraction brings Viola Dana in a comedy drama, "That Certain Thing."

The Harris vaudeville next week will inclue Bessie Rempel, Billy Howard and company in "Red, Green and Yellow." The two screen presentations will be Barbara Kent, in "Stop That Man," and Bessie Love and Johnny Walker, in "The Matinee Idol."

Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall play the featured roles in "Lady Be Good," the photoplay feature announced for the Grand next week.

Fred Thomson, in his latest production, "Sunset Legion," is announced for the Olympic screen next week.

Among the vaudeville attractions in the Sheridan Square next week will be Roy Zermain and Frances Farrar and company in "An Intimate Revue." The two screen features will be Marie Prevost in "A Blonde for a Night" and Fred Thomson in "Sunset Legion."

"MEXICAN FIESTA" FEATURE IN FLOTILLA

Cleo and Lamar and Spanolith, in a dance act, "A Mexican Fiesta," are playing nightly at the Flotilla Club, where they open a second week's engagement next Monday night. Etzi Covato's orchestra is playing a limited engagement. Bebe Falvo continues at the Flotilla Club with her new and enlarged revue. This is presented twice nightly at 7:45 and 11:30 o'clock.

FREE RECITALS ON ORGAN

James Philip Johnston will be the guest organist at the free organ recitals this evening and Sunday afternoon in Carnegie Music Hall. Mr. Johnston is the organist of the East Liberty Presbyterian Church. He will include on his program numbers by Bonnet, Jongen, Rameau and Widor. He will play "Carillon-Sortie" by Mulet, organist of St. Philippe du Roule, Paris. This selection gives a tone picture of a large carillon on a religious feast day.

The program for this evening includes: Fantasie and Fugue in G Minor, Bach; Songe d'enfant, Bonnet; Canon, Johnston; Gavotte, Rameau; Priere, Jongen; Intermezzo, Callaerts; March Pontificale from the First Symphony, Widor; In Springtime, Hollins; Paradise, Fibich; Carillon-Sortie, Mulet.

The program for Sunday afternoon offers: Overture to the "Occasional Oratorio," Handel; Springtime Sketch, Brewer; Adagio in A Minor, Bach; Choral, Jongen; Lamentation, Guilmant; Capriccio, Lemaigre; Angelus du Soir, Bonnet; March from the Third Symphony, Widor.

Dr. Caspar P. Koch will give the usual free organ recital in Carnegie Hall, North Side, at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Matthew Kamer, tenor, will be the guest soloist and Lyman Almy Perkins will play the piano accompaniment. The program will present: Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," Wagner; tenor solo, Preislied from "Die Meistersinger," Wagner; The Sunken Cathedral, Debussy; Danse des Mirlitons, Tchaikovsky; Largo from Serse, Handel; tenor solo, Fruehlingssehnsucht, Schubert; Sonntag, Brahmns; Der Hidalgo, Schumann; Fantasia for Organ, Eddy.

Sunday School Lesson Mark 14:1-42

AT THE HOME OF SIMON THE LEPER

By { Harlowe R. Hoyt / Walter Scott

Shortly before his betrayal, Jesus and his disciples went each evening to the little town of Bethany on the Mount of Olives. There, safe from interruption, they were entertained by Martha and Mary, sisters of Lazarus, whom Christ had raised from the dead.

On one of these evenings, the little band were taken to the home of Simon the Leper, who is believed to have been cleansed of this dreadful affliction by a miracle performed by Jesus.

As Christ lay on the couch beside the table, Mary came to him bringing an alabaster flask filled with nard, a precious ointment. Breaking the costly container, she poured the perfume on his head and feet and wiped them with her flowing hair. "Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred shillings and the money given to the poor?" Judas Iscariot demanded. "The poor ye have always with you, but me ye have not always." Christ returned. "She hath anointed my body beforehand for the burying."

CALL CHILDREN IN SAVE-UNION RELIEF PLAN

Children from 90 welfare organizations will take part in a miners' relief conference, it was announced today by leaders of the Save-the-Union and Pennsylvania and Ohio Miners' Relief movements. The conference has been called for Sunday afternoon in the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller street.

Miss Ruth Grafman, welfare worker at the Irene Kaufmann Settlement, 1835 Center avenue, has been active explaining the purpose of the conference to children of the various groups affiliated with the Settlement and has been urging them to attend. The children will be organized into a permanent association to raise funds for striking miners.

"The projected organization may affiliate itself with the National Children's Center for Miners' Relief in New York," according to an announcement from conference headquarters, 2503 Arlington avenue, Millvale. The New York City organization alone, according to the announcement, embraces 10,000 children of school age and clubs with a total membership of 10,000 more are affiliated with the national body in half a dozen other eastern cities and in Chicago, it is said.

More than $9,000 has been forwarded to mining camps throughout the country from the children's center, it was stated. Tag days, juvenile amateur theatricals, athletic meets, and house-to-house canvassing campaigns are being planned.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Beauty and Charm of Outdoors Prompts Brides to Arrange Weddings for Summer Homes

IT SEEMS to be quite the thing, this year, to be married at one's summer home instead of having the wedding in the city, where it is less convenient to use the outdoors as a background. And there is no denying the fact that there is a certain beauty and charm in a garden wedding that can't be imitated by a man-made setting.

Winifred Croft started the ball rolling this season when she decided to be married at the summer home of her father and mother, the Harry Wilson Crofts, at Greenwich, Conn. She married William Stavely Wilson, of New York, on May 19, you remember.

And now, I hear that another Pittsburgh girl has decided on a wedding away from home. She is Sara Moreland, daughter of Andrew W. Moreland, of the Schenley apartments. Her father has leased a villa at Spring Lake, N. J., and Sara will marry Harold Trowbridge Levett, son of the George H. Levetts, of Elizabeth, N. J., there on Saturday, June 30.

You will be interested to know that Katharine Modisette Marsh's two sisters, Mrs. Jacob Simpson Payton and Mrs. E. F. W. Salisbury, will be her only attendants at her wedding to William Clarke Fuellhart, son of the William O. Fuellharts, of Endeavor, on June 16.

Mr. Fuellhart's brother, Robert Charles Fuellhart, is going to be his best man, and the ushers will be Katharine's brother, James Ingraham Marsh, and George Steyenson, of New York, a Princeton classmate of Mr. Fuellhart.

It is to be a home wedding, you know, at "Llanfair Lodge," where Katharine lives with her father and mother, the Joseph W. Marshes.

Up in Butler today, at the home of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. H. Houghton Phillips, the marriage of Ruth Phillips, daughter of Mrs. Herbert Clyde Phillips, of the Alder Court apartments, and Ernest James Bisiker, son of the Ernest Bisikers, of Ashtead, Surrey, England, is set for 4:30 o'clock, with the Rev. Dr. John Ray Ewers, of the East End Christian Church, officiating.

Ruth is being given away by her brother, and she is wearing a frock of beige lace over flesh-tinted chiffon, with a bow of green ribbon at the back, and her leghorn hat is trimmed with ribbon of the same shade. She is carrying an unusually lovely bouquet of yellow roses and lilies of the valley, from which trails a long streamer of green ribbon and lilies of the valley, forming a train.

Her sister-in-law, as the matron of honor, is wearing yellow chiffon and lace with a picture hat to match, and her bouquet is similar in fashion. It is of deep yellow roses and spring flowers trailed with a yellow ribbon.

Little Susanna Idell Phillips, Ruth's niece, was flower girl, and her frock is of green tulle and she is carrying an old-fashioned bouquet.

Douglas Bisiker, of Ashtead, is his brother's best man. He and his parents, the Ernest Bisikers, and his sisters, Louise and Aileen Bisiker, are all here for the wedding.

After the ceremony there was a reception and dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Bisiker are going to sail next Thursday from Montreal for England, and are to make their home in Surrey.

Among those local folks who are planning trips abroad are the Charles B. Hortons, of Centennial avenue, Sewickley. They will sail next Saturday for France and there they will join Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Child and travel through Russia, China and Japan. They expect to be gone for several months. Mrs. W. B. Pierce, of Meadow lane, Edgeworth, gave an informal tea yesterday for Mrs. Horton, I understand.

The marriage of Miss Nancy Elizabeth Bryson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Harry Ballou Bryson, of Monitor street, and Harry Newton Smith, of Buffalo, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Smith, of Rochester, will be solemnized at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Third United Presbyterian Church by the Rev. William M. Woodfin. The bride, who will be given in marriage by her father, will be gowned in white satin made with a tight bodice and long skirt, with insets of Chantilly lace. Her tulle veil will be held with a cap of pearls and orange blossoms, and she will carry a shower of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her sister, Miss Helen McClung Bryson, as maid of honor, and her cousin, Miss Lettea Ellsworth Eckert, of Chicago, the bridesmaid, will wear blue and pink taffeta bouffant frocks with pastel horsehair braid hats to match, and will carry delphinium and roses. Howard Pfeinbach, of this city, will be best man and the ushers will include Robert W. Bell, of Greenville; Walter B. Rodgers, of Denver; Frederick C. Smith, of this city, and Carey Proctor, of Washington. A dinner for the families will follow the ceremony. After an Eastern trip, Mr. and Mrs. Smith will be at home in Buffalo.

The marriage of Miss Marjorie Sherwood Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merle N. Smith of Home avenue, Avalon, and William Kennedy Breeze, son of Mr and Mrs. John K. Breeze, of Meade avenue, Bellevue, was solemnized last night at 7:30 o'clock in the Smith home by the Rev. Charles W. Fulton, pastor of the Eleventh United Presbyterian Church, North Side, and the Rev. Robert A. Galbraith, pastor of the Bellevue Presbyterian Church.

The bride wore white satin and Chantilly lace, fashioned with a tight bodice and bouffant skirt, and her veil was held with seed pearls and orange blossoms. She carried a shower of roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Carolyn Smith, as her sister's maid of honor, appeared in silk moire shading from yellow to mauve, with a tight bodice and full ruffled skirt, while the bridesmaid, Miss Ruth Trimble, of Philadelphia, wore a similarly fashioned frock shading from mauve to orchid. They carried old-fashioned bouquets of spring flowers. Sherwood Smith, brother of the bride, was best man and the usher was Richard Lockwood, of Bellevue, with David Smith and Sherwood Paulin as junior ushers. A reception and dinner at the Shannopin Country Club followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Breeze will be at home after September 1 in Cincinnati, O.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Hussey Barnes, of Walnut street, East End, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Luella M. Barnes, and Boyd C. Love, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Love, of Freedom, which was solemnized April 21 by the Rev. W. A. Atkinson, of the First Presbyterian Church of Rochester, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Lehman were the attendants. Mr. and Mrs. Love will live in Sharon street, Rochester.

WOMEN HEAR GENERAL SCORE DISARMAMENT

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., June 2.—(A.P.)—Flabby muscles never helped any householder keep burglars out of his home, Brig. Gen. Albert J. Bowley told delegates to the biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs here yesterday in scoring persons who advocate disarmament as a guarantee of peace. The commander of the Eighth Corps area of the Army addressed the delegates in connection with a review of the famous Second Division, which won glory at Chateau Thierry and Belleau Wood, and declared it was the duty of the women to insist on the maintenance of adequate military and naval establishments in the United States. Mrs. John D. Sherman, of Estes Park, Col., president of the federation, was the reviewing officer, the first woman ever to be honored by the famous fighting outfit. The division stepped out with all of its infantry, artillery and tank detachments and with its own airplanes roaring overhead.

Gen. Bowley was outspoken in his criticism of the present Army strength. "When I find people who insist that the cure for war lies in disarmament I cease to have patience," he said. "If you let your muscles grow flabby that is not helping to keep thugs out of your house. It is up to you women, since you are a power in the land, to insist that this country shall maintain an adequate Army and Navy."

Denying that the Army wants war, since it knows what war is, Gen. Bowley declared that "preparedness" should not mean the largest army so much as it should mean an army "in keeping with the dignity of this country" and one sufficient for defense.

"We are not the bloody militarists that some would make us out," he said. "Your army is merely peace insurance. We do not believe that this country should be insulted, stepped upon or mistreated. At present there is a picayune strength of 118,000; this is a small, unfair nucleus. You women should see to it that the full quota, 280,000 men, is obtained."

After the review the delegates consumed 1,800 milk-fed barbecued chickens, prepared over open pits by cowboy "grub wranglers." The rest of the day was spent in visiting dude ranches, the Mexican quarter and other points of interest.

While there was little discussion of the vital problems before the convention during yesterday's play, considerable interest was shown in the report which the policy committee of the federation will make today.

Mrs. Sherman has announced that the activities of the Federation will be approved and that recommendations will be made that they be carried on as they are now organized. Some word on two very important matters is expected in the committee report.

Mrs. Sherman has recommended that the Henderson (Ky.) club be expelled from the State Federation for disloyalty in seeking to have Congress revoke the Federation charter. The Henderson club is dissatisfied because the Federation, chartered as a cultural organization, has dipped deeply into civic affairs.

Some word also was expected on Mrs. Sherman's recommendation that legal action be considered against publications that have accused Federation officers of turning the organization over to commercialism. In her annual message Mrs. Sherman recommended that the Federation seek whatever legal redress it may be able to gain.

For the benefit of its education fund, the Business and Professional Women's Club will sponsor the performance of "The Gold Diggers," by the Nixon players at the Nixon Theater, Tuesday night, June 19. Miss May Beegle has been chosen chairman of the affair, and the sale of candy to be conducted between the acts is in charge of Miss Myrtle Gillespie. This will be the first benefit held by the club since its organization five years ago. Mrs. Alberta Hull, new president of the organization, will entertain her executive board and chairman of committees at dinner in the Downtown Y. M. C. A. on Tuesday evening when plans for next season will be discussed.

Mrs. Frank B Saunders, who has been re-elected president of the Dormont New Century Club, will entertain her executive board and new committee heads at luncheon in the South Hills Country Club on Thursday.

Mrs. Charles Marshel Clarke, of Grove street, Sewickley, entertained the Elmira College Club of Pittsburgh at luncheon yesterday.

* * *

Mrs. Ralph W Harbison was hostess for the closing meeting of the Women's Overseas Service League this afternoon. There were annual reports, election of officers, election of delegates to the national convention in Boston and discussion of convention plans.

* * *

Election by the Jane G McGonigle Parent-Teacher Association has resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Leroy Foster; vice president, Mrs. W. H. Ochiltree; secretary, Mrs. Harry Bell; treasurer, Dr. C. C. Mechling. The executive committee includes Clay Myers, H. W. Ingersoll, Mrs. Pierre Blommers and Mrs. Edna Geer.

Why Fay King Favors Year-Long Engagements

NO WONDER HE WORE HIS FUR COAT UP TO MAY 15TH!
SHE SURE HAS GOT A BIG, HANDSOME BOY FRIEND
LIKE IT, HON?
FAY KING
SHEDDING THE SWELL RACCOON, AND SHIFTING INTO A NEW STRAW HAS COOLED MANY A ROMANCE

By FAY KING

NO DOUBT you will hear soon of several engagements being broken.

I regret to say that I have observed this often happens just after raccoon coats are put away for the Winter and straw hats put on for the Summer!

Romance is like that!

The boys who looked so big and handsome in the fur bennies look shockingly stringy when they appear without them.

And the change that a new straw hat can make sometimes alters one's whole life, it seems.

But it is only fair that it should be so, because it works the other way around, too.

These slim janes who could look so reedlike in a raccoon coat last Winter, look altogether too reedlike in a bathing suit. So that the girls who look overplump in their warm Winter clothes will blossom out just right in a bathing suit.

And so you see the shift from Winter wear to Summer wear is often a shift in romance, too.

The girl who falls in love with a fellow she meets in his raccoon coat often falls out of love with him when she sees him in his Summer golf suit.

The fellow who is crazy about a girl in her skating togs, can't see her in her bathing suit!

That's why I believe that an engagement should last at least one year to be sure of a happy marriage.

If the other party looks good to you in four season changes of wardrobe, the first hundred years will be happy!

NAME EUROPEAN ART JURORS

Anto Carte of Belgium and Colin Gill of England will be the European members of the jury of award for the Twenty-seventh Carnegie International, it was announced at Carnegie Institute yesterday. They will come to Pittsburgh for the jury meeting September 18, their first visit to this country, accompanied by Guillaume Lerolle, European representative of the department of fine arts.

In 1925 Carnegie Institute held a special exhibition of Carte's paintings and in the last International one of his group of five was awarded second prize. This painting, "Motherhood," later was presented to Carnegie Institute by Walter May of Pittsburgh.

Gill first exhibited at the Carnegie Institute in 1923 at the Twenty-second International.

THE CONSTANT FLAME

A Fair Maid Meets Love In Strange Surroundings

by WINIFRED VAN DUZER

Mrs. Haiden Introduces Emily to Her Crowd and She Makes a Hit

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Emily Day and her lively sister, Kitten, are daughters of a worker in the Rossiter factory. Both are prevented by poverty from mingling with the socially elect of the little town. Emily has made an ideal of Kent Rossiter. Marty Nolan, whose father keeps a "speakeasy," is devoted to her and she is astonished at his popularity with some of the rich girls who snub her. Mrs. Frances Haiden, a wealthy interior decorator, takes an interest in her and tells her the only aristocracy is that of work. At a party in the Rossiter home Emily grows jealous of Marilee Grainger, who is supposed to be engaged to Kent. She wanders into the moonlight. Kent follows her, kisses her and calls her beautiful. She gets a job with Mrs. Haiden. Her father dies and Rossiter offers help which her mother declines.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

OH, IT happened every day, no doubt. But these touched upon her world as two lines of a triangle come together with a third. Coincidence, of course.

Yet she felt a sudden chill. Some say the Sister who weaves the pattern of human lives is running a new and significant thread into the warp and woof of one's existence when that chill strikes the nerves.

CHAPTER XII.

BUT there were new friends. Frances Haiden was responsible for that. This woman with the singular appreciation of beauty established Emily in her salon in the Great View house.

"You must meet new people, dear. These you know in Lyall all are very well, but you must talk with others who do things and with some who only try to do things. Both are important. Character unfolds as ideas develop and those must rub against other ideas for complete unfoldment."

"But your friends all are such grand folks, dear Frances. They know everyone. I couldn't think of anything to talk about."

"A girl as pretty as you are doesn't need to talk, Emily. Just be. Besides you can listen, can't you? Too many people in this world don't know how."

And she set about designing a frock; chiffon in the ultra-marine that would turn the gray eyes to sparkling jewels and make the pale hair very fair indeed. There would be a frill running down across the bodice and winding about the skirt. And a big pearl buckle holding the girdle.

Mrs. Haiden was sincere in her concern for this dainty, gentle thing who loved her. The maternal instinct does not belong solely to women who are mothers in fact. But she did not deny to herself a certain thrill at the prospect of putting down a simple personality among the sophisticates who were her friends. There would be drama in that; the sensation which always walks with contrast.

And it was even so. Emily was brought to the others unexplained; beautifully dressed, quiet-mannered, intensely interested in everyone and everything. They thought her at first an ingenue well up in her part. Then, when she never stepped out of character, they began to see her as a convent product, daughter of some wealthy family too old-fashioned for the merry-go-round social activities of the day who had, for reasons best knowon to themselves, entrusted her worldly education to Mrs. Haiden. It appealed to Mrs. Haiden's sense of humor to let this belief stand.

One who looked upon Emily rather as an exquisite old daguerrotype come to life was Kingdon Coles, young and some said brilliant dramatic critic on a New York newspaper.

Coles was a person of intense blondness, tall and clear-cut, whose eyes appeared sometimes to be weary with much looking.

He was supposed to be a connoisseur of feminine charm, always strolling at the edge of love but never stepping over. His preference was Broadway stars; Frances once told Emily that a name never seemed to mean much to him till he had seen it in lights.

"Some men," she explained, "can't turn their thoughts from the dazzle. It's a child streak in them. And sophistication stands for the greatest thing in the world."

But Coles was not thinking of sophistication now. He glanced at Emily—walked across the room to kiss the hand of a Russian countess turned Greenwich Villager — moved restlessly and glanced again. Presently he sat down beside her and tried to draw her out.

Later he found himself talking on his favorite subject—himself—and wondered. Still later he began to suspect that here was a novel type of woman.

"She's astonishing," he told Mrs. Haiden. "I didn't suppose they made 'em any more. You mean to tell me she's just what she seems? Face value?"

Mrs. Haiden's eyes were very sharp and they narrowed a trifle. "She's a baby, King. None of your tricks, old boy."

"My God, Frances, give me credit for something! She's like a piece of Dresden in an old chateau. You think a man could put a finger on anything so ethereal?"

She said, "See that you don't try. I'll be looking out for her."

He was mightily offended but he went back to Emily and told her stories of the theater which made her eyes big and flushed her with wonder.

However, she shrugged when Frances asked her how she liked him. Agnes' increasing bitterness kept always before her the image of Steven Day as a martyr—victim of those who had the upper hand in a world where the combination of price and power were supreme. She had no great sympathy for her mother's attitude, but it influenced her nevertheless.

So she shrugged away the mention of Coles—shrugged away the lure of his tales about the magic back-stage world—and remarked, in the manner of her father, that he was another idler.

"How some people do mistake a white collar! Don't be fooled by that, Emily. It's what's in a man's head that counts. Did you know that brain-work is many times as hard as work with the hands? Remember that when you're tempted to use the word 'idler' too easily."

And because she saw this small friend being warped to a Bolshevistic slant, she determined that association with Kingdom Coles would be a good thing for her. It would teach her something of a strata with which she came in no real contact and it would counteract the evil of what she knew to be Agnes' thought.

She, herself, would keep an eye on the thing; see that it didn't develop into another experiment for the young critic. She would bring them together and be ready to snatch Emily away if danger threatened.

So she made her plans in all good faith and sure intent. It was one of the few times in her life when her judgment went wrong.

Home Mortgaged, Herron Furniture On Block Today

NEW PHILADELPHIA, June 2.—Mrs. Bessie Herron, 24, wife of William Herron, 41, who recently began a life sentence in the Ohio Penitentiary for the murder of his wife's sister, Viola May, 23, would not confirm or deny that she expected to remove from her home here, which she mortgaged to save her husband from the chair, to Columbus with her 23-month-old son. The sale of the household effects is today.

1,500 MORE JOIN SAFETY CLUB

Fifteen hundred boys and girls in Jeannette have joined the "Just Kids Safety Club" in a body. Their applications were received yesterday from Miss Rovensky, supervisor of schools. Their admission to the organization brings its membership up to 16,000.

The "Just Kids Safety Club" was established recently by The Sun-Telegraph. It is based on the comic pictures, "Just Kids," by Ad Carter, which appear in The Sun-Tele daily. The members receive attractive buttons.

On joining the club, boys and girls are required to promise to "remember to look up and down before crossing the street." Because it teaches children to be careful, teachers and parents are enthusiastic over the new organization.

The youngsters themselves are taking the greatest possible interest in the club. Children's societies already in existence are being converted into "Just Kids Safety Clubs."

High School Head, Married, Sued By Woman

NEW PHILADELPHIA, June 2.—Fred Lust, principal of the Midvale High School, was made defendant yesterday by Miss Josephine Reiss, Dover, in a $5,000 damage suit, on allegations that Lust, father of five, proposed marriage to her while married.

Lust said he would fight the suit and mentioned probable counter charges.

WHAT'S ON THE AIR

THE Duquesne University Orchestra and members of the faculty of the university's school of music will give a concert over WJAS at 7:30 o'clock tonight. EAST LIBERTY TO HEAR BOND ISSUE DISCUSSED

Members of the East Liberty Trade Association will hear about the people's bond issue at their weekly luncheon Tuesday in the East Liberty Y. M. C. A. East Liberty business men are boosting sites in that district for the proposed town hall. The proposed river boulevard from Verona to Washington boulevard also would help East Liberty particularly.

BUGS BAER Says

AFTER Mr. Coolidge vetoes that farm relief bill sixteen more times, Congress will probably change the subject.

Cal is exhausted from shaking hands with vetoes.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Congress passes the bill, Cal endorses it with an executive razzberry, it goes back to Congress and then back to Cal.

Every time Congress pings it, Cal pongs it.

We don't know why farmers want relief. They have been relieved of everything they own.

Farming in America has reached very high stage of deficiency. When a farmer lays himself down to sleep at night he's as happy as a beetle in a museum.

There is nothing for him to worry about. Motor trucks kill his chickens, crows eat his corn, automobilists break off his apple blossoms, boll weevils take care of his cotton, thunderstorms sour his milk and the middlemen get his profits.

There is no more work around the old farm. Rains water the crops, the sun ripens them, and they don't have to be harvested because everybody is eating in delicatessen stores.

What little is to be done is accomplished by machinery. The old oaken bucket is an oil can now.

Which is why Congress and Cal cannot agree on the farm relief bill, and both are experts on the subject.

Cal was born a farmer.

And Congress will die one.

the records to be set here will be buying records

PITTSBURGHERS like to set new records. And Pittsburgh women will thrill to the opportunity of setting new buying records beginning next Wednesday, June 6th, when Boggs & Buhl's 59th Anniversary Sale begins.

We've planned for weeks and months to secure timely, fashion-right merchandise for this great event. And we've succeeded—even beyond our expectations.

The prices will be so low for articles of such splendid quality we know Pittsburghers will set new buying records every day during the 59th Anniversary Sale.

How can Pittsburghers help setting new buying records when they can boast such records as these:

Pittsburgh's Health Record

Pittsburgh has the purest water in the United States from one of the finest water systems in the world. This water is filtered through sand at a capacity rate of 200,000,000 gallons daily.

Pittsburgh health officials have brought about a larger reduction in the typhoid mortality rate than that of any other large city in the United States.

Pittsburgh, through the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research conducted the first comprehensive survey ever made on smoke abatement and pollution. Between the first survey in 1912 and 1913 and the check-up in 1923 and 1924 it was found dense smoke had been reduced approximately 70%.

Malaria is unknown in Pittsburgh except through imported cases.

Pittsburgh has a lower death rate from tuberculosis than any large city in the eastern United States.

Pittsburgh's Shopping Record

The purchasing power of Pittsburgh is estimated at one billion dollars a month which is equalled by few cities of the world.

Department store sales per person in Pittsburgh are almost double those of any other city in the world.

Department stores in Pittsburgh do a larger volume of total business than those of any other city in the world, except New York and Chicago, regardless of population.

The railroads and street car lines of Pittsburgh bring the record breaking throng of 161,214 people daily to the shopping district.

Pittsburgh's Banking Record

There are 81 banking institutions in Pittsburgh including 18 national banks, 28 state banks and 35 trust companies.

Pittsburgh's banking institutions have total resources of $1,200,000,000 (one billion, two hundred millions of dollars).

The bank clearings in Pittsburgh amount to $9,197,686,607 annually (nine billion, one hundred ninety-seven million, six hundred eighty-six thousand, six hundred and seven dollars).

Bank deposits in Pittsburgh amount to over $1,064,199,458 (one billion, sixty-four million, one hundred ninety-nine thousand, four hundred fifty-eight dollars).

One of Pittsburgh's trust companies has the largest SURPLUS of any bank in the world.

Another of Pittsburgh's trust companies has an UNDIVIDED surplus exceeded by only one other bank in the world.

Pittsburgh's General Record

The largest general traffic tunnels in the country, the Liberty Tunnels, are in Pittsburgh. Connecting downtown Pittsburgh with the South Hills there are twin tubes over a mile in length.

Two central stations in the greater Pittsburgh district generate more electrical energy annually than all the industries of New England generate by water power.

The 271 agency railroad stations representing the 25 railroads of the greater Pittsburgh district carry over 25% of the passenger traffic of the nation and handle over 30% of the entire country's rail tonnage.

Pittsburgh is the center of the most densely populated portion of the United States.

The purchasing power of Pittsburgh's population represented by the per capita savings and wealth is the highest in the country.

Pittsburgh is located in the heart of the largest and most productive fuel region of the continent making it the finest location for manufacturing facilities in the country.

Pittsburgh has a higher percentage of native white population than Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago or Boston.

The first great effort at world peace was inaugurated by a Pittsburgher who established the Hague peace palace.

The Republican Party as a national organization was established in Pittsburgh on February 22, 1856.

Pittsburgh as a part of Pennsylvania enjoys the benefits of a lower tax system than any other state in the Union in the manufacture of iron or steel or wood or a combination of the three. And there is no tax on personal property.

Pittsburgh's Industrial Record

Pittsburgh holds the record as the Workshop of the World.

One plant in Pittsburgh leads the world for manufacturing air brakes.

The world's largest corporation making rolling mill machinery is located at Pittsburgh.

The world's largest commercial coal plant in the country is in Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh has the world's greatest aluminum finishing works.

From 85% to 90% of the world's vanadium and radium are produced in Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh leads the country in the production of acids and other chemicals for manufacturing purposes.

More glass is produced in greater Pittsburgh than the combined output of 41 states.

Pittsburgh produces larger quantities of steel and its products than any other community.

Pittsburgh is the national center for plumbing supplies.

More electrical machinery is made in the Pittsburgh district than in any other.

More railway signals and safety devices are produced in Pittsburgh than anywhere else.

Greater Pittsburgh's diversified industries have had the record expansion of 50% during the past decade.

There are 3,145 industrial plants in Pittsburgh representing 259 different industries.

—and With These Great Records New Buying Records will be Set at Boggs & Buhl, next Wednesday and During the Entire 59th Anniversary Sale

Nature Lovers Avoid Bad Weather

BAD weather last year had a disastrous effect on the number of visitors to Kew Gardens, London. The decrease, compared with 1926, was 84,459, the highest attendance being 60,014, Easter Monday, and the lowest, 6, November 26.

Notable Month of Marriage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DOWN through the generations June has been the "marriage moon," devoted to brides, weddings and honeymoons.

Why? It would be hard to say! Perhaps because everyone is a poet in June, longing to express the inexpressible joy of nature, and this urge causes birds to sing, buds to burst into blossom and betrothed couples to wed with sweet ceremonial.

Certain it is through many a June has marched to stately music a procession of brides. Can't you see grandmother at 18 with stiff Victorian nosegay, hoop skirts, white silken gown that stood alone, and real lace veil! Mother at 20 was equally demure in a ruffled, bustled skirt and wasp waist of white satin, vail and orange blossoms.

Now in June, 1928, comes daughter, surely loveliest of the three from the tip of her independent, bobbed head to the last inch of trailing veil, wedding amid clouds of roses!

FRAGRANCE of orange blossoms, strains of the solemn march, tossed bouquet, laughter—the moment of her wedding is the most dramatic and fleeting of a girl's life!

Last June, Joan and Jack, Angelina and Dick, Mary and Bob were wed. Let us see how they are progressing this June!

Joan and Jack had a gorgeous wedding. So lavish were the exotic blooms, the satin-ribboned aisles, so sumptuous the pageant, that there was actually a flurry of reform talk about simpler weddings afterward. The honeymoon was past before the bride and groom recovered from headaches and pesimism caused by wedding rehearsals, sieges with dressmakers and tailors, bachelor suppers and ceaseless rounds of pre-wedding entertainment. So worn out were they that the moon, smiling through a mist of clouds of their wedding night, seemed to them only damp and cold. Romance fled through their world.

Their attachment, none too deep to begin with, could not survive its unfavorable start-off. This June finds Joan combining freedom of a bachelor maid with the latitude she feels should be hers as a "young matron." She has joined the ranks of idle wives.

ONE of these days, she will lightly depart for Reno or Paris, with a friendly hand-shake to her husband. Little wonder these two are pessimistic about marriage! They accept all its rights and none of its responsibilities, and they never give it a thought as a permanent union which can be made wondrously happy and worth while if only both partners do their best.

Millions of couples blunder along, making a mess of married life, because they have thought about and studied about every subject under the sun except the art of living and loving. Do not let egotism, selfishness and false standards bar the door by which wisdom, greatness, humility and joy can enter to bless your marriage.

No big wedding for Bob and Mary!

"We found we loved each other and got married," was Mary's explanation.

* * *

"WE just up and did it," added Bob. "The minister said a few things, and we said 'Yes' and 'No,' and it was all over, and the most wonderful privilege in the world was mine—that of calling Mary my wife!"

Bob said this with a smile and with simple reverence, which was not lost on his pretty little bride. She smiled back at him tenderly.

Bob and Mary have a vaudeville act, which plays the small time. Like many vaudeville folk, they are domestic and loyal.

High rents do not disturb this couple. Before they were married they had to pay rent for two rooms, but now one does for the two.

"Chicken or vegetable soup?" asks Mary, wielding a can opener, when it is supper time.

"How about tomato—are we out of that?" responds Hubby.

RECENTLY, Baby arrived on the scene. She laughs most of the time when she is not sleeping, even though her cradle is sometimes a trunk-top.

Each week, whatever their bookings may be, Mary and Bob put away part of their salary. Now that the family has grown, they are planning to give up the stage and buy a movie theater in a small town. They dream of a bungalow where Baby can have lots of sunlight, grass and flowers.

These two get wholesome fun and thrills from their work and play together. I am willing to prophesy that their children will rise up and call them blessed." For affection, humor, hard work, mutual sacrifice and common sense characterize their attitude toward each other.

Somewhere between the informality of the wedding of Mary and Bob and the showy formality of that of Joan and Jack, lies a golden mean—the suitable, simple, happy ceremony. Angelina and Dick found that happy medium. They apply the same moderation to every-day living. On their return from the wedding trip, Dick exclaimed, "Our honeymoon is going to last always!"

"If Dick says it will, it will," smiled Angelina. And I believe they are right—it will!

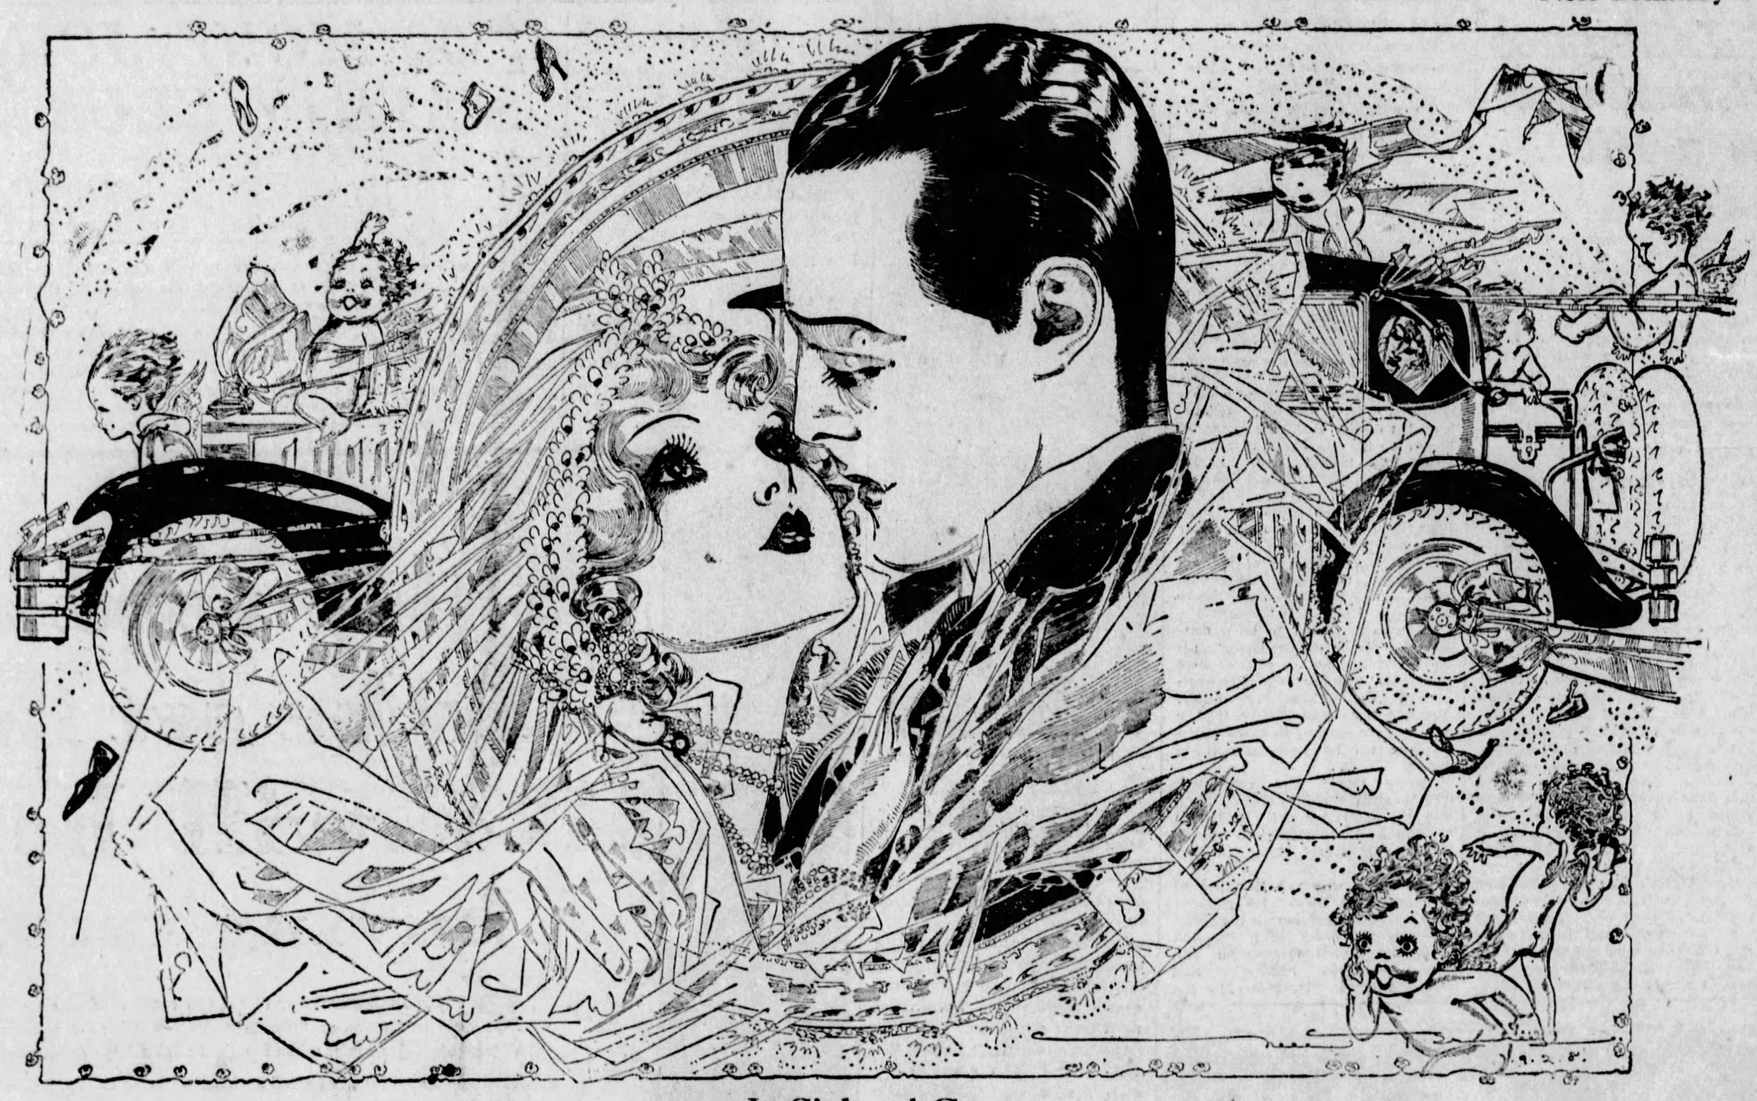
Beige Combination

An almost yellow beige is much seen right now. It is often combined with brown, and is really lovely for the brunette.

THE FASHION FOR JUNE

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



In Girls and Cars

THE high colored, wordy fashion articles may ponder this and that. They may talk silkily to "Mesdames and Demoiselles" about whether to wear lizard-skins on a picnic or not again this year. They may tell you positively that if you go one tone off moon-shine grey or piggywig pink you will lose your CHIC, never to find it again. They may airily wonder about the width of skirts, the return of the feminine "manner," and whether to let your head stay flat in the back or encourage a little chignon there! They may solemnly warn you to "keep it short," or gayly assure you that everybody is going Greta Garbo, and if you don't fall in line with more hair you will be one of those strange old-fashioned creatures left over from other times . . . And don't you notice that the girl with a close-cut swath up the back—that once daring "shingle"—does look terribly pre-war? . . .

Lady Fashion may do all this and be quite useful, for the Summer in general. But she needn't mind about any articles on JUNE. We know what's the pinnacle of fashion for June in GIRLS and CARS. It's Brides and Honey-moon cars. That's the last word in damsels and motors. Bridal veils, and the car that goes on the honeymoon. Those two, real-lace or just creamnet, special-body or just plain ready-made, are the entirely, absolutely, last word in the mode for June.

So the Fashion-expert needn't "pay no mind" to June, thank you. We know the uttermost of what is the top-cream in what to wear and what to do in that rare month.

While I think on brides, those young girls who are about to "be 'em," never seem to get settled on what is the most charming and new and delightful and unusual and becoming way to wear their veils, no matter how many times a fellow makes them idea-pictures on the subject. You see, they get to wear that rare little head-dress but once. If they are good girls they never dream that they might do otherwise. So it must be a perfect thing.

So in a picture or two, for the many girls who have asked for it, I'll make a strip of bride heads, like flowers in a border, for them to pick and choose from.

I forgot to say a word about the groom in the picture; and he is so necessary to the ensemble! —NELL BRINKLEY.

Let Roses Be an Aid To Charm

By MARIA JERITZA

ROSES and June are here.

"It is now June," wrote Nicholas Breton in 1626. "Now doth the broad oak comfort the weary laborer, while under its shady boughs he sits and sings to his bread and cheese."

"Moon of the sassafras," the Indians call June, while Eskimo calendars run, "June, when many fishes come all silvery and bright." Then there is the "hidden brook," of which Coleridge writes, "in the leafy month of June, that to the sleeping woods singeth a quiet tune." Yes, June is lovely to look at, lovely to listen to, brings songs to the heart. But to most of us its crowning beauty is roses.

ROSES are to be had for little or nothing at this season. Why do you not keep one freshly blooming in cool water on your kitchen window sill or office desk while you work? It will prove a sheer joy and inspiration to beauty.

Roses are in many ways a practical aid to your loveliness and charm. For many years the peasants of Provence have been distilling their cabbage roses into rose-water, and it has come to be regarded as a delicious and reliable tonic for the skin.

If you like the perfume of roses, you will find it a delight when you come in from the street, tired and hot, to spray rosewater from an atomizer over your neck, face and hands, then wipe it off with absorbent cotton.

THERS are ever so many cold creams with rose-water as a base. Woul you like a formula for a rose potpourri?

Spread the rose-petals from your bouquet on newspapers to dry. Add to them orange-peel cut in small bits. This likewise should be dried about two days and nights.

With each cupful of rose-petals combine a teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of ground cinnamon, a teaspoonful of ground cloves and the peel of half an orange.

Place small copper or glass bowls on your dressing table and low stands and fill them with this potpourri. Now and then, run your fingers through the leaves to stir up their fragrance and perfume the room and your hands. You will need a fresh supply of the potpourri from time to time, so save your rose-petals.

ATTAR of roses is an exquisite and, of course, most expensive perfume. But there are less costly rose perfumes to be had. Cheap perfumes in rose are not pleasant or like the real blossoms.

Rose oils will blend beautifully with jasmine, lavender or bergamot to make an individual perfume. Or you can blend them for instance by using jasmine bath-salts, rose bath soap and orange-blossom bath-powder.

Roses have always been regarded as a mystic symbol of perfection. If you study their beauty and make use of the aids they offer, part of their exquisite loveliness will blend with your personality and become your very own.

Asparagus Custard

Trim the ends from a large bunch of fresh asparagus, boil until quite soft, then put it through a sieve. Add the beaten yolk of an egg, salt, pepper and a little sugar. Line buttered timbale moulds with the mixture. Beat three eggs in half a cupful of rich milk, add onion juice, salt and pepper. Fill the moulds, then set them in a pan with hot water reaching well up near the top of the moulds and bake until the custard is set, and firm. Turn out on toast rounds and serve hot.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland, M.D.
U.S. Senator from New York

Bad Eating Habits Affect Sleep

THERE is no greater boon than the ability to sleep well and no greater curse than light and fitful sleep. You may be a millionaire, but unless you can sleep you will soon be a wreck.

DR. COPELAND

The other day I read about a murderer who surrendered himself to the authorities. When asked why, he said he must have sleep. There seemed no particular remorse so far as the murder was concerned, but the fear of discovery deprived him of sleep and that affliction drove him to the sheriff.

Loss of sleep, or insomnia, as the doctors call it, is one of the exciting causes of insanity. Without sleep the nervous system breaks down. To keep the brain and nervous system in working order there must be regular hours of rest and sleep.

Many things are responsible for insomnia. There is no greater factor than worry. One of the earliest lessons you should learn is to cast off your worries. Never take them to bed with you. You will get no refreshing and restoring sleep if you do.

Improper diet and irregular habits are destructive of refreshing sleep. Constipation permits the development of poisonous substances which damage the nervous system. At least seven persons out of 10 who have sleepless nights will be found to suffer from constipation. Needless to say, habitually wrong diet and improper manner of living frequently result in constipation and consequently in insomnia.

If the bad habits of eating or of living result in undernourishment, naturally the nervous system suffers. In consequence, inability to sleep may follow.

Excessive smoking and the use of drugs that act upon the heart may cause insomnia. Whenever the heart is disturbed in its regular and normal action the sleep is likely to be affected.

Of course, noise will break the rest of the soundest sleeper. He may not be conscious of its influence, but his rest is sure to be disturbed if he sleeps in a noisy place.

Poor ventilation is another disturbing factor. The sleeping room must be properly aired or the sleep will not be refreshing.

If you suffer from insomnia let me beg of you not to take drugs in order to get your rest. Many a life has been ruined by resort to sleep-producing drugs. Sleeping powders, sleeping potions, sleeping drops, are all dangerous. They lead to drug addiction and to conditions far worse than insomnia.

Try a tepid bath. Get into a tub of water only a degree or two above the temperature of the body. Stay there for 10 minutes or even half an hour. Then dry off without vigorous rubbing and go to bed.

Sometimes a drink of water or a glass of warm milk will promote sleep. A full meal is harmful, but a very light lunch may be helpful.

Deep, regular breathing seems to induce sleep sometimes. Sleeping in the open air, or with the windows wide open, will bring slumber when the ordinary atmosphere fails.

Honest fatigue is the best remedy. Exercise in the open air until you are really tired will do wonders.

It may be necessary to read for an hour or so to get your mind off your worries. But the best rule is to make the bed a place for sleeping and go to it determined to slumber.

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

By HELEN ROWLAND

MAN'S WEAK MOMENT

VERILY, my daughter, there be three things which mystify me.

* * *

The way of a woman with an automobile.

The way of a radio fiend with the dials.

And the way of a man with SPRING FEVER!

* * *

For now cometh the season of lassitude, when a man's bones are filled with weariness and his spirit with languor, and his life is just one "weak moment" after another!

HELEN ROWLAND

When he is too weak to lift a spade or swing a hoe in the garden—but not too weak to swing a wicked golf club or to wave a tennis racket.

* * *

When he is too feeble to mount a step-ladder and hang the summer curtains—but strong enough to climb the steps to the baseball bleachers and to face sunstroke or pneumonia while he shouteth for the home team.

* * *

When he is too fatigued to push a lawn-mower or to wield a garden rake, but not too tired to run a flivver, peg a tent or devour the contents of a well-filled hamper.

* * *

When he waxeth faint at the thought of carrying the old trunks down from the attic and packing the furs in camphor—but waxeth strong again in time to pack up his fishing tackle and his knapsack.

* * *

When he droopeth wearily after ten minutes of bending over a flower bed—but straighteneth up perceptibly at the thought of digging bait, lugging water and rowing a boat through pleasant mountain streams.

* * *

Verily, verily, this is the magic hour when the "BOY" in every man's heart ariseth and belloweth for recognition, and he longeth to go forth and PLAY as a little child.

* * *

When he "playeth hookey" from the office, reveleth in wild neckties and blinding hosiery, watcheth the skies for signs of baseball weather, gazeth after passing flappers, and yelleth and singeth at conventions.

* * *

For seven months of the year a man laboreth and is civilized—but with the return of spring he reverteth to type and becometh an innocent savage!

And the only thing that causeth him a WEAK moment and crippleth his muscles is the sight of work!

* * *

Yet, what woman doth not envy a man the playboy spirit in his soul—which is the spirit of Eternal Youth? SELAH.

Horoscopes

Sunday, June 3

SUNDAY'S horoscope hold presage of sudden and far-reaching opportunity for change or travel, but shows tendrdy for employment and finance. But there is great stirring and enterprise which may be turned to advantage.

Those whose birthday it is are at the threshold of an important year, with probable change and travel and new ventures, which with care and good management of funds and hard labor may turn to fine advantage.

A child born on this day may be bold, enterprising, resourceful, original and adventurous. It may succeed by application and in unusual channels of skill or ingenuity.

The crest and crowning of all good, life's final star is Brotherhood.—EDWIN MARKHAM.

Monday, June 4

Monday's astrological forecast points to great progress and prosperity in many lines of endeavor but emphasizes the prospect of excellent results in new undertakings, especially in those negotiations launched in connection with large corporations, "trusts" or combines. It also promotes secret agreements or understandings with diplomats or officials. Powerful friendships are indicated.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a prosperous year, with affairs expanding in every cherished direction. Transactions and understanding with secret societies, organization, diplomats or others in high places should thrive.

A child born on this day may be ambitious, talented and with judgment and acumen to reach high position and attain cherished ends.

Life has no pleasure nobler than friendship.—DR. JOHNSON.

FOR THE LOVELORN

Undecided

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a new member, but hope you can give me some of the wonderful and useful advice you give others. I am a girl 20 years of age and fell in love three years ago with a fellow about the age of 24. My parents objected to my going out with him on account of his being of a different nationality than I. I used to meet him on the street every night because we were dearly in love with each other. My parents found out and forbade me to meet him once more. Dear Miss Gale, what shall I do, listen to my parents or still go on meeting him?

UNDECIDED.

If this boy's nationality is all your parents object to, I would have a serious talk with them and tell them how much you care for him. It is cheapening to met secretly, you know. Ask your parents if they would prefer to have you see this young man at home or elsewhere.

Downhearted

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been reading your advice for a long time and think it is wonderful, so I'm writing to see if you can help me out in a case like this. I'm a girl of 18 and have been keeping steady company with a fellow 24 for about nine months. Last month he gave me an engagement ring, which I accepted, because I think we have been going together long enough to understand each other. My parents do not like him for these reasons: We are not the same religion; they say he is too old for me; they are afraid he will not keep me the way they have for the past 18 years. On the first reason he had told me he lied about the religion just so I would go with him. Before he gave me the ring he told me he would turn or do anything just to have me. On the second reason you understand I am young, but you would not say he is old. He is a real plain fellow, does not drink or gamble, as most fellows nowadays do. On the third reason my parents are not rich or not poor, but well off. We are planning to get married in June, but haven't said anything to my parents, but I'm afraid they won't give consent. So, Miss Gale, would you advise me what to do. Oh, Miss Gale, he just appeals so to me, please do not tell me to give him up, as my parents do. I know they want nothing for me but happiness, but I'm sure he will make me happy.

DOWNHEARTED.

You are very young, my dear, and can afford to wait another year or so before going aainst your parents' wishes. Perhaps, when they see that your love is real and has lasted for several years, they will give their consent.

Brown Eyes

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have written to you before for I need your advice real bad, but I have not seen it in print for I made a mistake and wrote on both sides. Now, Miss Gale, here is my problem. I belong to a club and one day I saw the correspondent's name in the paper so I corresponded with this boy, who is 15 years and I 17. We have been writing to each other for a year now. He stopped writing. Shall I write and start the friendship again, although I do not know him or ever saw him or his home. So on account of that I can't say I love him. He sent me his picture long ago. Please give me your very good advice for I will do as you say. BROWN EYES.

Let the correspondence drop, of course, my dear. You should never have started it in the first place.

Mussolini Imbues New Spirit in His Party

Brings About Fresh Energy And Combative Spirit in Depleted Forces

What Has Gone Before

From boyhood Mussolini was rebellious. School duties irked him. When he became a teacher the hard routine of the calling became so distasteful that he decided to travel abroad. In Switzerland the self-exiled youth became assistant to a bricklayer but found the work too hard. Radical tendencies developing, he was expelled from Switzerland, after having mastered the French Socialist in debate. As an irredentist he continued to get into trouble.

Initiative Wins Popularity

By VITTORIO DE FIORI

CHAPTER IX.

THE fiery editor of the "Avanti!" quickly imbued the depleted forces of the Reds with a new spirit. In a short time he put the paper on a paying basis and saved it from bankruptcy. In two years he increased the membership of his party from 50,000 to 150,000. His frankness and combative spirit won him popularity, while his burning oratory infused new faith and ardor into the discouraged hearts of the masses. His was not an easy battle. In addition to the capitalists, the young leader had to face the opposition of the Syndicalists and Anarchists. But he knew how to snatch victory from the very jaws of defeat, aided by the brilliant, compelling eloquence that spared neither friend nor foe.

BENITO MUSSOLINI

He was a great admirer of Danton, and each year he commemorated the Paris Commune with a speech. One of these anniversaries fell on a rainy day. In comparison with the vast crowds that his lectures always drew, there was only a small number of Radicals gathered to listen to his words.

He waited over half an hour before ascending the platform. When he finally began speaking, with angry features and flashing eyes, he said to his limited audience:

"On a dawn that will forever remain famous in the history of the world, the revolutionists of the Commune launched their attack against the Bastille. They were not like the rabbits and lambs of the Italian Socialist party, who speak of social revolution and are afraid to face the rain!"

New Energy Needed

The party needed new energy and combative spirit. It needed, above all things, to be purged from the Democratic-Bourgeois infiltration of Freemasonry, which, recognizing Mussolini's worth, repeatedly made him seductive offers. But Freemasonry, to him, was the living symbol of the decay of the old ruling classes of Italy; it was "a catacomb of martyrs that had been transformed into a conclave of office-seekers." Nothing in Freemasonry appealed to him, neither its humanitarian, pacifistic, democratic, equalitarian doctrines, nor its adulterated internationalism, nor its fervid but hypocritical patriotism, nor its gross anti-clericalism, nor its puerile ritual, which aroused in him an almost physical repulsion.

At the convention of Ancona he had a resolution passed declaring Socialism and Freemasonry incompatible. Nine years later, in 1922, he was to declare the same incompatibility of Freemasonry with Fascism.

Rebukes Author

He was pitiless with the ambitious and ruthless with the vain. A Socialist who had literary yearnings asked Mussolini's permission to write a series of articles on class warfare. Mussolini, in return, asked him to write an article on "The Revolutionary Myth." The pseudo-writer, who had not fully understood the meaning of the topic, did his best and presented his article a few days later. Mussolini read the manuscript with a stern face, in silence. The author bravely asked him:

"Well, what do you think of it?"

"I think you are the most egregious ass in the Socialist party," Mussolini coldly replied. "and I think you would do well to let literature severely alone."

He was frequently invited by Italian emigrants in France and Switzerland to hold lectures in those countries.

In Zurich, during the sommer of 1913, he was speaking one day to a numerous audience in the local Italian Socialist Hall. His theme was suggestive: "The Contemporary Poets of the Revolution."

After exhaustively discussing the topic, he quoted a few lines from well-known poems dear to all Radical hearts.

Recalls Beauties

Then, seizing his inspiration from the splendid summer twilight on Lake Zurich, he alluded, whether intentionally or accidentally no one knows, to the natural and artistic beauties of Italy. He did not call it "our country," for to speak of "our country" to those exiles would have been the same as to speak of a bad stepmother to the stepsons she had driven from home and abandoned to their fate. He simply recalled the sweetness of far-away memories, the peace of native towns, and the joys of home, which only an emigrant can fully appreciate. In so doing, he gradually aroused the heart-burning, soul-consuming homesickness of the exiles. Many an eyelash was wet with tears, many a throat was choked with sobs. Mussolini, although he perceived upon those weather-beaten faces the undefinable expression that arises from memory and longing, kept on speaking, insisting upon his topic, until from those pent-up breasts a powerful, uncontrollable cry escaped: "Long live Italy!"

It was one of the hottest days of a sultry summer season, and the thronging mass could scarcely breathe. Mussolini had already been speaking for an hour and a half. At one moment, thinking he detected a certain impatience in his audience, he asked: "Do you feel tired? Shall I stop?"

And that suffering, stifling mass of humanity, reeking with perspiration, shouted back as a single man: "No, no, go on, speak as long as you like!"

Mussolini spoke two and a half hours that day, and perhaps it was on that occasion that he realized that the glorification of one's native land, if inspired by true sincerity and love, has the power to sweep away all crowds, irrespective of party or political creed. Perhaps he learned that day that the masses, though oppressed and harassed by the daily struggle for bread, remain attached at heart to the distant memories of childhood, to the land where they were born and to the skies that first shone upon their dreams and hopes. Perhaps he understood that spirit is always predominant in man, and that spirit rises above the wretchedness and misery of the flesh to live its own life of beauty and grandeur.

Mussolini knew how to use his fists as well as his tongue. When he thought that an opponent deserved a physical lesson, neither obstacles of time and distance nor fear of arrest could deter him.

One day, while he was still editor of the "Avanti!" in Milan, he learned that the proprietor of a Geneva cafe had publicly slandered him. In spite of his former expulsion from Switzerland, he asked his friend De Falco, a political refugee, then editor of "L'Avvenire del Lavoratore" of ugano, to accompany him to Geneva. With all due precautions, they arrived in that city. Mussolini lost no time. He immediately went to the cafe, which was crowded at that time of day, sought out the proprietor, and knocked him down.

This clamorous incident, of course, led to the discovery of his presence on Swiss soil. The police were ordered to arrest him at sight, but he managed to elude them. On his way back, while still in Switzerland, he stopped at Flamatt and lectured to the Italians for an hour; then he recrossed the border and returned to Milan, filled with the satisfaction of one who has accomplished a meritorious deed.

BALTIMORE JOINS PGH.

Baltimore today became an ally of Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania manufacturers and shippers in the issue to obtain freight rates from Eastern trunk line railroads which will enable this district to compete with the Chicago-New Orleans rail and water route to California on which rates have been cut by the Illinois Central Railroad.

As a result of the refusal of the Interstate Commerce Commission to suspend the Illinois Central rate, Pittsburgh and Baltimore will wage unrelenting warfare against the Chicago-New Orleans rate-cutting campaign.

Pittsburgh City Council is on record supporting the contention of Western Pennsylvania manufacturers for more equitable rail-and-water rates and the Maryland city will join through the Baltimore Association of Commerce. Charles R. Seal, director of traffic and transportation of the Baltimore association, was asked today to attend the meeting of manufacturers and shippers in the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce auditorium Tuesday morning. A. R. Kennedy, traffic manager of the Pittsburgh Steel Company, will preside and the meeting will be attended by the traffic representatives of the largest manufacturing interests of Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Youngstown, Wheeling and other cities in this territory.

Ousted Official's Re-Election Fought

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., June 2.—(AP.)—Application has been filed with the County Court to set aside the nomination of Wylie Shepherd, who defeated two opponents for county commissioner at Tuesday's primary. Shepherd recently was removed as commissioner by Judge P. D. Morris, Marshall County Circuit Court, who sustained charges against him, although a grand jury had refused to indict.

Shepherd made his removal the basis of his candidacy and received 400 plurality.

The petition for Shepherd's removal was filed by Martin Brown, Moundsville attorney, who also asked that Shepherd be removed as commissioner.

TWO BODIES FOUND

As they were about to drive away from Dixmont station, after obtaining the body of an unidentified white man found on a sand bar in Ohio River this morning, Deputies W. M. Jackson and J. T. McQuade were halted and given another body. The second victim, also unidentified about 35, had been struck by an eastbound passenger train on the Fort Wayne Railroad.

CLARKSBURG PAIR HELD IN AUTO LIQUOR SEIZURE

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 2.—Fifty-seven gallons of liquor, officers said, were found in the machine of William Perry, 20, and Joseph Muniz, 26, of Clarksburg, W. Va., who were turned over to the state police. They were placed in jail to await a hearing Monday night.

CAN'T BAR DANCERS

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 2.—Washington's marathon dance is to go on, although a committee composed of ministers and other citizens presented a petition to Mayor Robert H. McBurney asking that he prevent the contest, which is scheduled to start at Washington Gardens at 12:05 o'clock Monday morning.

Mayor McBurney told the committee, after consulting with Solicitor Meyer Goldfarb, that he could not legally prevent the dance being held, as the Gardens was licensed to conduct such a business.

"Unless it is conducted in such a manner that it is offensive or becomes a nuisance, I have no right to interfere," he said.

Fully 50 couples are expected to compete, including a number who have become professionals.

ASPHALT LAYER FOR OLD ROADS

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 2.—(AP.)—Early resurfacing of several sections of concrete highways with rock asphalt is contemplated by the State Highway Department, it was learned yesterday from department officials.

Increasingly heavy traffic over some of the roads built during 1919, 1920 and 1921, has caused sections of the concrete to raise in spots. Frost also has caused some cracking and disintegration. In some sections the concrete was found to to be of too light construction for heavy vehicles.

The new plan, it is said, will be to lay an inch of asphalt over the bad sections.

BODY HANGING TO TREE FOUND AT JOHNSTOWN

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 2.—(AP.)—The body of a man, believed to be that of John Gurniak, of Minersville, Schuylkill county, was found hanging in a tree off the William Penn highway, near here, yesterday. Papers found in the man's pockets showed Gurniak had been naturalized at Pottsville, December 12, 1927.

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

By HAVEY J. BOYLE

AFTER the balloon race on Decoration Day traffic on all roads in the vicinity of McKeesport was so thick that Pittsburghers occupied three or four hours in making their way home.

All the visitors, however, were not delayed. Bert Stoll, a Detroit reporter, and Roy Jansen, a Sun-Telegraph reporter, were anxious to make a hasty get-away, so they hired an airplane at Bettis Field and flew to Rodgers Field in Aspinwall, from which point in a cab it was a hop, step and a jump to Pittsburgh. The combined cost was $14, including airplane hire and automobile hire.

That wave of politeness and courtesy which struck the movie cathedral attendants has now spread to hotel attaches. One is greeted with a sweet "Good morning," as one steps into the elevator on the way to breakfast, and as one leaves the elevator to retire at night, a "Good night" is called out to the patron.

The formal salute, common to the army and navy and movie officers, has yet to be taken up in hotel life, but it likely is on the way, as the uniforms have a decided military aspect.

All is not lost, however. The taxicab drivers seem still to be immunized against the over-politeness attack. They still chew tobacco heartily and call you "Buddy."

WALTER LAIRD, by the way, tells how the taxi drivers were up in arms against a colleague who committed a faux pas with a well-paying guest. The guest in question rode from the Duquesne Club to his home in the East End and never failed to tip the lucky cabby who drove him a dollar. One night he was short of small money and as a consequence tipped a driver who did not know him a nickel. The driver went into a rage. The passenger reported the driver's unruliness and for a time switched to a rival concern. Later he switched back after amends were made. The unruly cab driver cost his comrades many a dollar tip for quite awhile.

TWO STOLEN IDOLS

MYSTERY! THRILLS! ADVENTURE! LOVE!

by FRANK L. PACKARD

The Boat Goes Down; Many Are Drowned, Bob Is Safe

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The body of Tom Kingsley, once a dashing sea-faring adventurer, is picked up in a fragile craft by Capt. "Scarface" Sweeney and his mate, Marlow, off Singapore. Mute evidence on the body testifies to the fact that the man died in a struggle. Tom's brother, Robert, also an old "sea dog," is notified of the death and receives the various articles found on the corpse. Among these are two small but handsomely carved ivory idols. Robert Kingsley has good reason to believe that Hsi Yan, an ancient enemy, has returned after thirty years to seek vengeance. The idols are stolen and Young Bob starts out to recover them. Hidden in the hold of the ship he overhears five Chinamen plotting. There is great danger of the boat going on the reefs and Bob is afraid. The East Indian "Holy Man" is stabbed to death by one of the Chinamen. The Holy Man turns out to be Erna's brother, and she accuses Bob of the murder.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

THE ship was lifting, falling by the stern, still with that unbouyant motion—and listing badly now to starboard. He staggered, lurched along the deck, scarcely able to keep his feet. He climbed the ladder to the boat deck with the girl in his arms—and here, at the top of the ladder, as though shocked and appalled, and robbed for an instant of all power of movement as his eyes swept the deck, he came to a sudden halt.

A low cry came from the girl in his arms. He could see that her eyes were wide with horror. Mechanically he allowed her to slip to her feet. She stood there swaying. He kept his arm around her.

"Don't look!" he said hoarsely.

A yard away, face down on the deck lay the pajama-clad form of Captain Karler, a revolver still clasped in his outstretched hand. And here a native, and there another—and, amongst these, the white uniforms of two of the ship's officers. The boats were gone—all except one—on this side of the ship at least. There was a small swarm of natives around this last boat now, fighting, screaming, yelling, shrieking—there was not room for all.

Almost lifting Verna from her feet, half dragging her, Bob Kingsley jumped forward—into the ruck. His right hand wrenched his revolver from his pocket, and he clubbed with it right and left. The boat was almost full now—it was being lowered.

He saw Carter's face in the stern sheets. The man's head was streaming blood — and he seemed to be badly hurt. But he was cool, collected, calm—snapping out his orders to, presumably, those (very few probably) of the ship's crew who manned her.

"Carter!" Bob Kingsley shouted. "Carter! Here's Miss Lyle!"

Carter did not hear! What difference did it make? What could Carter do? Good officer, Carter! Not the kind to save himself—his duty to go with the boat—the only chance the boat had.

The davit falls creaked with their load even over the inhuman medley of sounds. The boat was almost level with the deck. Those in the boat at the gunwale's edge were fighting furiously to keep any more from getting aboard from the deck. The boat seemed to be already overcrowded—except that near Carter at the stern there might be room for just one more. Two Malays, just in front of Bob Kingsley, were struggling for the place. The first Malay leaped for it—the second Malay stabbed the other in the back, and, as his victim flung up his hands and dropped to the deck, he jumped into the boat himself.

With a madman's strength Bob Kingsley leaned forward, caught the knife-wielding Malay around the neck and beneath the chin, and, hoisting the man bodily upward, hurled him back upon the deck. The next instant he snatched at the girl's two hands, and, swinging her over the edge of the deck, dropped her into the boat that was already now some three or four feet below him.

A white face stared back at him. There were many faces in that boat—he saw only one. It was disappearing now from sight.

"Good-bye!" he called. "Good luck!"

But it was Carter's voice that answered:

"Sorry to leave you, old man. I take back what I said!"

Clinging to a davit, leaning far out over the ship's side, Bob Kingsley watched the boat. His eyes were strained upon it—still straining for a glimpse of one white face. Madman! There was nothing now but a tiny black object, like a child's toy boat, engulfed in a smother of spray. And now it was gone! It seemed to have gone —over.

His lips moved. The great shoulders of the man shook with a sudden sob. Gone! The wonderful little she-devil was gone! It wasn't fair! She was too young, too fine and clean and beautiful, too gloriously genuine in her hate to go out like this! Something of weariness, something of poignant and irreparable loss, seemed to have come into his life. And, gray of face, he clung there, his eyes fastened on the spot where he had last seen the boat.

And then a mighty shout came welling up from the full heart of the man—and again—and still again. The shouts were lost in the sweep of the wind and the roar of the sea, but he was unconscious of that. He saw the boat again—glimpsed it for an instant—still battling its way onward. Good old Carter! The man was hurt, wounded, perhaps seriously so, perhaps even near his end, but he'd win through. Once over the reefs there was comparatively sheltered water. Carter would make it. He, Bob Kingsley, was somehow sure of that now, sure as one is sometimes sure when, deep in one's soul, there comes, from no apparent outward or physical cause, the knowledge that it will be so.

He turned away. He could not follow the boat any more, or hope to see it again—it was hidden now somewhere out there beyond in the darkness. And now for the first time he took stock of his own position. The Monotah seemed to have struck the reef almost bow on, and to be hanging there as though on a hook. The sea was breaking aft over the lower deck. The stern of the ship was lower—sinking, in fact. It was obviously merely a question of time—whether 10 minutes or an hour. When the stern had sunk low enough to uncant the bow sufficiently, the Monotah would slip backward and go down in the deep water at the outer edge of the reef.

He stared around him. Where had they gone—those who had been left on board? There must have been at least 10 of them—all natives. There had been some women and children, too. All crazed, of course! They weren't here now. They didn't know what a lifebelt was, much less know where to find one on the ship. Not much good—a lifebelt! Almost a mockery! The only chance, though! Better round up the poor devils, and do what he could.

A sea boiled over the lower deck. The bow lifted, seemed to slip, then pound down again—and hold. Bob Kingsley was picking his way along the deck now. There wasn't anybody here—except the silent forms that sprawled grotesquely in the darkness. Three white uniforms! He didn't count the natives, but one of the latter had on cotton trousers with a gaudy design that stood out even in the darkness—huge flowers—probably red! How many times would the Monotah repeat that last performance—and hold? A fish very insecurely hooked!

He came to a sudden halt. On the deck at his feet was one of the three white uniforms. The man seemed to have moved—or was it merely as some limp, inanimate thing would have moved with the swaying of the ship? None of the other forms lying here on the deck seemed to move, though! He stooped quickly down and stared into the man's face. It was Parsons.

"Parsons!" he called.

The man opened his eyes, smiled wanly, and shook his head.

"No good!" he said. "Going out! Did our best. Blighters rushed the boats—jammed the first one in the davits. Rest of 'em swamped. All drowned. Just as well off here—as—as—"

Parsons didn't speak any more —didn't move any more.

CHAPTER XX.

CRIES reached Bob Kingsley now from the other side of the deck; women's cries, shrill, hysterical; men's voices shouting, confused, excited. He ran in that directions and came around on the port side. This was what Parsons had meant! A boat jammed in the davits! There she was, wedged tightly enough, the nose of her slithered across the deck. And around the boat now, but only rendering each other's efforts abortive in their mad eagerness for life, the men who were left, and the women, and even a child or two, tugged and pulled frantically, some this way and some the other.

A boat! There was a chance, then! There was nothing the matter with the boat. A glance showed him that it needed only cool, concerted effort to free her and swing her out from the davit falls again. And flashing through his mind, as he sprang forward now, was a mental picture, amplifying those last few graphic words of Parsons, of what must have happened here. This boat that remained was probably the first that was being made ready for launching—and in panic the natives had all rushed for it before it was barely clear of the chocks. And then hell had broken loose, and there had been no chance with a raving mob amuck of clearing her. It had been the next boat, and the next, and the next, then. And these had certainly only been launched (even if they swamped later on, as Parsons had said), because Capt. Karler and most of the officers—there were two more white uniforms lying here on the port side—had gone down fighting in an effort to hold back the maddened tide. A fight going on around each boat simultaneously so that there might even be a chance of swinging it outboard! God's mercy! And now, with mind and reason gone, these last few maniacs, save that they were not actually stabbing each other with knives, were as suicidal and murderous in what they were about as ever!

He was amongst them now. He pushed two women and a whimpering child aside; and then his voice rose in cool, sharp command.

"Come over to this side!" he ordered in broken Malay. "All of you! Lift her here!"

For a moment they paid no heed to him. He caught one man by the shoulders, forced the other's hands down on the gunwale, and by gestures demonstrated what he wanted done. He called again to the others, less sharply this time, more quietly, reasuringly.

"Like this!" he said. "All of you!"

They came then, clustering around him.

"Now!" he cried cheerily. "Up with—"

A sudden blackness came before his eyes. He was conscious that he had been struck a vicious blow on the back of the head; he felt his hands relax their hold; he heard a strange, confused mingling of cries—and then in semi-consciousness he was aware that he was being roughly dragged along the deck.

This state of semi-consciousness continued for a short period, and during this time, in a dazed, blurred way, he realized that he had been taken into a cabin, and that, lying there on the floor, his arms and legs had been tightly bound. And then his head began to clear. There was a light in his face now—a light that was held very close to his face. Something hot fell upon his cheek—a candle drip. A man was bending over him. The man's features took form—yellow features — the features of a Chinaman.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE FINAL TEST

By LILY WANDEL

NEAL LOOMIS felt that selling on commission was a flat failure. He had given it a good test and here was the result—he wanted to buy orchids and diamonds for the lovely white and gold Cicely Roberts whom he had met the other night at Duff's crowded apartment, to say nothing of taking her to the Clap and Trap dance tomorrow night and he was, so to say, financially embarrassed.

It had been Miss Green, who should have been called Miss Brown because her eyes were a warm nut-color while her hair was like sun on a wood thrush's wing, who had been enthusiastic about the commission arrangement and had loaned him books on salesmanship. Miss Green had a warm, optimistic way of talking that was very contagious and whenever Neal had had lunch with her or had taken her to the movies, he had gone forth in the world convinced that he was on the road to wealth. Now he determined to march into her little office that stood like a guard house before his chief's and tell her plainly that she had misled him.

Miss Green, however, came hurrying out of her guardhouse, straight to his desk, beaming with news. "Neal, a customer must be entertained tomorrow night. Dinner and theater, Mr. Martin said, and he left it to me whom to choose. Something tells me there is a large order at stake, but I didn't breathe a word to the chief, for fear he'd want Jim Blaine to do the entertaining. Now, you're so fond of tests, here's one for your ability and personality!"

Tomorrow night! That was the night of the Clap and Trap dance. Hadn't he visioned himself a thousand times floating over the ballroom floor with the lovely white and gold Cicely in his arms? Hadn't he already written her a little note inviting her to go? It was not as if he would have another opportunity to invite this exquisite visitor of the Duffy family to another dance, because she was leaving town soon. He had longed for just such a chance to show his chief and incidentally Miss Green that he could sell silk, but did not love and the girl of his dreams count for more? "This," he told himself, "was a tremendous test."

"I'm awfully sorry," he said, after a pause, "but I have an important engagement for tomorrow night, Miss Green." Sometimes he called her Ruth, but Miss Green seemed more suitable for this occasion.

"Very well," she replied crisply, "I'll speak to Jim Blaine." He could feel that she was frightfully disappointed in him.

The next morning Neal was walking briskly along the street, his chin squared with intense determination. He was going to show Miss Green that he could get orders without taking a customer to dinner and theater. He pictured himself coming back to the office, slapping down a fat order. A gold and white vision of a slim girl would be his inspiration! Then he pulled himself sternly down to facts, recalling all the salesmanship hints from the books Miss Green had loaned him, going over and over what he would say to reluctant buyers, until he was fairly bursting with selling ability.

He slumped into the office at 4:30, decidedly weary as to muscles and feet and fiery energetic in his opinion of buyers and persons who recommended selling on commissions. He was just mustering up courage to ask Jim Blaine for a loan of $25 when that good-looking young man leaned over his desk. "Neal, do me a favor? Take this customer out tonight, will you? I've a date with a girl for the Clap and Trap dance."

In Jim's persuasive eyes Neal saw only a vanishing $25 supplanted by a mortifying interview with the cashier who as far as advancements in cash went, had a heart of steel. He gave Jim an icy stare of disapproval and stalked straightway to the cashier's office where a new assistant, still optimistic, had been left in charge.

Jubilantly, with $26 in his hip pocket, Neal sauntered back to his desk only to be stopped by a young stenographer. "Somebody left a message for you, Mr. Loomis, over the telephone," she informed him, cheerfully. "A Miss Roberts said she couldn't accept your invitation for tonight on account of a previous engagement."

For a moment Neal stood stunned by the news, then Miss Green's voice talking to Jim Blaine arrested his attention. "Very well, Jim, since you can't go, then I'll take Miss Roberts to dinner myself!"

Miss Roberts! Neal was bathed in warm enlightment. Why had it not occurred to him that Cicely might be in town on business? He rushed over to Miss Green and, ignoring Blaine, said quickly, "I'll take this customer, Miss Cicely Roberts, to dinner."

"Oh, will you?" breathed Miss Green in relief her cheeks like cream red apples. "I don't know if her first name is Cicely, she signs herself C. Roberts. I'm so glad, Neal— and treat her right."

He left the office humming a tune but Jim Blaine was whistling.

One and a half happy hours later Neal, groomed to perfection, walked into the lobby of the appointed hotel, wondering excitedly what Cicely would say when she saw him! A mature, well-dressed woman with remarkably keen eyes glanced at him curiously. He looked away, vaguely disturbed. Presently, he reassured himself, a white and gold vision would appear, for no matter what Cicely wore the gold and white effect would be there. He had, nevertheless, an uncomfortable feeling that somebody was observing him.

The mature woman with the keen eyes blocked his way with a soft voice. "Miss Green telephoned that she could not be here for introductions. But she described you so accurately I am sure you are Mr. Loomis. I am Miss Cora Roberts."

The only thing that saved Neal from exposure of his feelings was his instant recognition of another test. Here was one that called for all the ability and personality he could muster. He gave Miss Cora Roberts a smile that completely captured the entire attention of the lady.

Whether it was this smile or that Neal uncorked his stored-up bursting supply of salesmanship pleasantness, at any rate, before the dinner was over Miss Cora Roberts confided to him that she was soon to be married and the prospective bridegroom was enlarging the business on a gigantic scale. Neal retaliated the confidence with telling her how deeply he was in love.

Curiously, he enjoyed himself immensely and when the dinner was over he gave the buyer the choice of a show or the Clap and Trap dance. Miss Roberts declined both in the most charming manner. She must meet her fiance who was arriving on the 9 o'clock train. If they could retire to the writing room for a few moments there was the little matter of business she wished settled.

When Neal escorted her to a taxi they had made a definite engagement to meet again. She would bring her fiance and he his lady-love. He watched the cab move off, trembling a little, for something burned in his pocket like a red hot coal, something positively overwhelming, that made him tingle from head to toe. He called it the result of a test, but it was the biggest order that had ever come into the life of Mr. Martin's business.

Neal stepped into the next taxi in line. "The Clap and Trap Club," he told the drive. He was glowing with triumph, a victory from his own efforts, but tremendously in need of sharing his joy with some one.

In the main ballroom of the Club he saw her dancing in the arms of a flush-faced Jim Blaine. She was exactly as he had visioned her a thousand times, an exquisite gold and white fairy. The milky gleam of her bare arms and back eclipsed the snowy fluff of her short frock; some ornament on her golden head reminded him of a hard frost; her long, silk-clad legs suggested graceful icicles. A beautiful, glittering snow queen that sent a shiver of awakening through him, who was in need of the warmth of understanding.

Outside he gave a taxi driver an address with the instructions to "make it snappy" and five minutes later he dashed into a modest looking apartment house, stopped before a door on the second floor where a card indicated that a Miss Green lived within.

Children's Earnings

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

THE four young Bascombs had more energy and time than they knew how to use, and less money than they needed for their everyday wants. The matter of money for lunches, car fare and school supplies was one that worried Ella, Carrie, Jack and Denny, to say nothing of their long-suffering parents.

In the afternoons and over the week-ends the boys were racing all over the neighborhood, while the girls were wishing for some place to go and something to go on.

Carrie is the domestic one in the family, and she found some consolation in making candy at home —when she had the sugar.

It was a kindly neighbor who suggested to Carrie that she could earn her spending money by making candy to sell.

The child was charmed with the suggestion, and she asked permission to make a pot of chocolate fudge.

The fudge was unusually good, and 12-year-old Carrie cut it in small blocks, put it into tiny paper sacks, arranged the sacks in a box and took it to school the next day. That afternoon she came home with 10 dimes—70 cents clear profit. She invested that in peanuts and syrup, because she could afford to sell peanut candy cheaper than fudge. Next day she took a large box of five-cent bags of candy to school. Her candy was so tasty and so pure and so reasonable in price that she soon built up a good trade.

She says that next summer she is going to freeze a gallon of ice cream at home every day and sell ice cream cones to the children in her neighborhood. Denny is her able assistant, and she divides the proceeds with him.

Ella decided that she would follow her younger sister's example. So she began casting about for some way to earn money. She was talking with her cousin about the matter, when the cousin said:

"I want to go to town tomorrow afternoon; if you will come over and stay with the children I'll give you 50 cents."

Since then several other young women in the community have asked Ella to take care of their youngsters while the mothers played bridge or went shopping or attended a meeting. And because Ella is kind to the little tots and sometimes helps the older ones with their lessons her services are in demand.

Jack, who has no outstanding accomplishments, wondered for a long time what he could do to make some money. At last he contracted to feed the rabbits and to bring in coal for an old lady. Her helplessness appeals to the boy's protective instinct in a way that makes his service an honor instead of a menial task.

Now the woman next door has engaged him to deliver the sandwiches that she makes for drug store counters. And he feels like a real business man.

The Bascomb house is like another place, since the children began converting their energies into dimes. The children are busy and alert and independent; while their parents are relieved of the financial strain that many small wants demanded.

An effort to earn money to spend it for useful purposes means something in character building. Carelessness in the matter of expenditures indicates a moral laxness. It is found among the children of the poor as well as the rich.

"In earning and spending money the child comes face to face with some of life's most important problems," says E. A. Kirkpatrick.

"The moral significance of money cannot be ignored." He also says that the training the child receives along this line must be informal. Experiences in actually earning and spending money is the basis of all financial training.

Madge Relieves Jackson's Mind About Miss Lincoln

IF I suddenly had dashed my fist into the face of young Mr. Jackson, I do not think I could have startled him more than I did by my purposely insolent question concerning Eleanor Lincoln. That he understood the reason for my studied rudeness, I saw as his face crimsoned, then paled. I was suddenly ashamed of my anger, and he further disarmed me by the remorseful earnestness of his answer.

"Oh! I am desolated," he cried. "I see how that speech of mine concerning young Veritzen must have sounded to you. You were justified in asking me what you did just now, even when I am sure you already are certain of the answer. No. Miss Lincoln is not married, nor must she be while she is here in this country. Of course, you do not understand and I can tell you nothing without violating a confidence. But, please, believe me when I tell you that I meant no slight to young Veritzen."

"And, please, believe me that I am not angry," I returned, smiling, "only a bit remorseful for my quickness. I think, moreover, that I can set your mind at ease upon this particular question. In the first place, I am sure Miss Lincoln is taking a leaf from the book of our young moderns here in America. They are not considering marriage. They are having too good a time."

The ghost of a smile touched young Mr. Jackson's lips.

"Like the song: 'I don't want to get married. I'm having too much fun'?" he asked.

"Exactly," I retorted. "I am sure Miss Lincoln is simply indulging in a rather hectic flirtation."

His face expressed no enthusiastic acquiescence in my belief, and I played a card which I felt a bit ashamed of using, although I knew that his attitude, conscious or subconscious, warranted my employing it.

"But even if she should be a bit serious," I said slowly, "I don't think you need to fear any romantic entanglement as far as young Veritzen is concerned. He is so in love with Mary that he is not certain upon which side of the horizon the sun rises or sets."

I saw his fingers clench the wood of the steering wheel, and I wondered if in my zeal to acquit Noel of interest in the girl whom this youth patently considered far above him socially, I had given a dangerous fillip to young Jackson's interest in Mary. My conviction deepened as he turned his troubled eyes upon my face.

"But," he said slowly, "he is constantly at The Larches, and not—" he stopped and I finished his sentence.

"Never over here," I said. "That is true, but that is probably due to Mary's attitude. She isn't particularly encouraging to his suit."

I added this speech without any particular reference to the truth of my deductions. But a little warning bell had sounded in my consciousness at his reaction to my statement of Noel's interest in Mary. There was nothing which would so fire his already ardent interest in her as the idea that she returned Noel's romantic passion.

His face cleared, and after a second I was astonished to hear him laugh lightly.

"You have relieved my mind of two worries, Mrs. Graham," he said, "one for myself and one for Miss Lincoln, for whom I am in a way responsible. I cannot tell you how just now, but before long I hope to be able to tell you the whole story. I am sure—Eleanor" —again he hesitated at the name —"will come to her senses after a while, and you will know all about it. And in the meantime, you'll let me see Miss Mary as often as possible, won't you?"

He was so boyishly eager and engaging that my heart involuntarily softened toward him.

"Yes, duly chaperoned," I promised smiling.

"But please be the chaperone yourself, always," he pleaded gallantly.

Stuffed Baked Tomatoes

Hollow out the stem end of six large tomatoes. Drain and cut fine a can of asparagus tips, add to them a half cupful of dry crumbs, pepper, salt, a teaspoonful of sugar and enough light cream sauce to bind. Fill the tomatoes and brush over with melted butter, dust with pepper and salt, and bake in a shallow buttered pan. Bake until tender but not soft enough to collapse.

Uses of Salt

Salt is excellent for removing stains from enamelled ironware. If sprinkled over a carpet before sweeping it will keep down the dust and help to brighten the color.

SCOTT PUTS PUNCH IN PIRATES

LOUGHRAN RETAINS CROWN

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

BEST IN PITTSBURGH — SATURDAY, JUNE 2, 1928 — ELEVEN

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

Scott Proving That Pirates Got Considerably More Than Adams in Exchange for Cuyler. Blake's Clean Slate Marred After Five Straight Wins—Bartell Makes His First Error.

IN all the comparisons attempted by baseball fans this spring in an effort to determine whether the Pirates or the Cubs got the better of that big off-season trade, the only players mentioned were Hazen Cuyler and Sparky Adams.

Pete Scott

Every one appeared to have forgotten that another player figured in that exchange and that Pittsburgh obtained more than Adams.

But that third man is looming large right now, and is playing a part that adds not a little to the material on the Pirates' side of the scales in the comparisons that persist.

PETE SCOTT is the player in question. The fans forgot all about Scott while they were debating the relative merits of Cuyler and Adams, but the player who was "thrown in" when the deal was made has had a lot to do with the breaking of the Buccaneer slump.

Two days ago, when one of Joe Harris' legs went wrong and the Rovers were left without a first baseman, Manager Bush decided to send Scott to the initial bag, and the manner in which the catcher-outfielder has carried out the assignment has left nothing to be asked.

IN his two days on the bag, Scott has had the unusual number of 32 putouts to handle, or 16 in each game. He took care of them all without a slip, however, and in addition to his field work yesterday he cracked out three hits, including a double, scored two runs and knocked in another. All around, Pete has come to the rescue of the Bucs very satisfactorily at a time when both first basemen are incapacitated, and little more could be asked of even a regular than he has produced in the first two days.

Burt Shotton

ANYTHING can happen in baseball. Not only have the crippled Buccaneers won two games in succession, but the Phillies almost copped one yesterday. Hub Pruett held the Cardinals to a single run, only to lose out because the Phillies failed to score. Leave it to the Phillies to finish one below any total the other side may make.

Wonder if Burt Shotton would not prefer to be back managing a minor league club, as he was in Syracuse last year, rather than have such an outfit as the Quakers on his hands.

THE Phils have now lost seven in a row in their latest losing streak, and of their last 32 games they have won only three—one from Boston, one from Cincinnati and one from New York. Their longest mark of the year is 10 defeats in a row, but they are in a fair way to equal or surpass it now.

IT is hard to imagine any ambitious baseball man being willing to accept such a hopeless job as posing as the manager of a club whose owners seems bent only on selling every good or promising player almost as soon as they get hold of him.

So perhaps Shotton did not pick the job. It may have been wished on him without his consent.

FANS are not yet able to figure out all the angles of the queer deal whereby Shotton, manager of Syracuse, which club is owned by the Cardinal bosses, was suddenly appointed manager of the Phils, and a short time later Jimmy Wilson, the best catcher in the National League, was transferred to St. Louis for a couple of rookies—if you want to believe that story.

And that, too, after Pittsburgh had offered four good players for Wilson, with as much money on the side as the Philadelphia club might demand.

Fred Blake

"NOT for sale at any price" was the answer the Pirate chiefs received. After tusseling with the problem for several weeks the fans are still asking "What's behind it all?"

Why are such deals not investigated by the league whose pennant race every year is made to look ridiculous at one end by having a burlesque ball club like the Phillies in it.

THE Pirates spoiled a clean slate for a Chicago pitcher by winning again yesterday. Fred Blake, who was a Buccaneer himself back in 1920, had not been defeated this season, but had won five games in a row—two from Pittsburgh, and one each from New York, St. Louis and Cincinnati.

DICK BARTELL made his first error of the season yesterday, on the third chance offered. Before making his first foozle, Bartell accepted 19 putouts and 35 assists, a total of 54 chances.

Dick also cracked out two more hits yesterday, boosting his average appreciably and making it more strongly probable than ever that it may be no easy task to pry him loose from the second-base job immediately.

BUCS END LONGHOME STAND TODAY

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

OFF the Pirate bench comes another substitute to give the ailing Pirates a punch that makes them look like a real ball club. From an obscure corner of the Buccaneer dugout, Pete Scott has jumped into the limelight over night.

They said that Stockton Pete was weak against the righthanders, and among those who carried this motion apparently were Peter's pals of last year who yesterday saw their former mate pound the clever offerings of Fred Blake and another Cub righthander, for a smashing double and two fine singles.

The Bushwhackers copped yesterday's battle, 10 to 4, Scott's hard-hitting and clever work around first base playing a big part in the victory over the Bruins. Peterkin hung one of his drives on top of the scoreboard, the ball almost going out of the lot by way of the information bureau. Another of his hits clicked against the rightfield stands, this blow being hit well enough for three bases. Webb, however, played the carom and held Scott at first.

SCOTT IS STAR

In the absence of Joe Harris and Grantham, Scott again performed at first like a veteran, his 16 putouts requiring some dancing master stuff that showed off Peter in a fine light. Then, too, there is a peppery angle to the play of the Westerner that adds a flavor to the actions of the team.

The Bruins and Buccos are slated to tangle again this afternoon the game to be the last at Forbes Field until after the return from the East of the home team. Tonight the Pirates and Cubs head for the East to begin their first invasion of the seaboard cities.

Either John Miljus or Fred Fussell will oppose the Cubs in the finale. Both are ready for the assignment. Manager McCarthy is expected to call upon Art Nehf for slab duty.

Burleigh Grimes held the Cubs to six hits yesterday as the Pirates landed their second straight victory. Opposed to Burleigh at the start was Sheriff Blake, who came to Pittsburgh with a run of five victories and no defeats. Blake was shelled off the hill in the fourth, Hal Carlson taking his place. Hal gave way to a pinch-hitter in the sixth and recruit Holly finished.

Winners Paid By Pyle

NEW YORK, June 2.—(AP.)—C. C. Pyle, promoter, has divided the pot of gold among the 10 prize winners in his now historic Los Angeles to New York footrace. The awards, in the form of certified bank drafts, were distributed by Tex Rickard last night before the start of Pyle's 26-hour team running race at Madison Square Garden.

First prize of $25,000 went to Andrew Payne, of Claremore, Okla., amid appropriate ceremonies which included photographing of the winner with Promoter Pyle and Promoter Pyle's check book. John Salo, of Passaic, N. J., received a draft for $10,000 for finishing second.

Third prize money of $5,000 went to Philip Granville, of Hamilton, Ont.; $2,500 to Mike Joyce, of Cleveland, for finishing fourth. Six other prizes of $1,000 each were given Giusto Umek, of Trieste, Italy; William Kerr, of Minneapolis; Louis Perrella, of Albany, N. Y.; Ed Gardner, of Seattle, Wash.; Frank Von Flue, of Kerman, Cal., and

Swetonic Ranks Third Among A. A. Hurlers

CHICAGO, June 2.—(AP.)—Baby Doll Jacobson, former American League outfielder, is hitting the trial for a major league comeback.

Although in the uniform of Toledo, a second division club thus far in the American Association race, Jacobson provided the batting punch in the circuit's seventh week of competition by adding 34 points to his average and climbing into second place among the leading batsmen.

Fred Heimach of St. Paul, whose pitching performances this season have caught the eye of Chicago White Sox scouts, retained his lead among the American Association hurlers even though he dropped one game while winning another. His record is 10 won and three lost. Wingard of Milwaukee is second with six victories and two defeats and Swetonic of Indianapolis is third with five won and two lost.

CHILLY SAUCE By CHILLY DOYLE

THE Reds are still on their wild rampage and nobody seems to be able to explain it. They measured three flag contenders for stinging defeats as they plouged through the Pirates, Cardinals and Cubs. Already they are in the East cutting up cute didoes.

The defense play of the three "Singer Midgets"—Ford, Critz and Dressen—seems to figure largely in the present drive of the Rhinelanders. Ford and Critz are stopping more runners at the middle post than any other club. If you can consistently keep enemy runners away from the half-mile mark you stand to win the close games.

JACK HENDRICKS has a flock of classy pitchers in rare form, despite the injury which befell Red Lucas, who is leading the parade. An outstanding athlete in the doings of the Reds is Val Picinich,

ON TRAINING JAUNT

Two of the entrants in the Indians' marathon working out over a stretch of the beautiful course on a highway walled by stately Redwood trees. The race is an annual event. Winner of first place receives a reward of $5,000 and $5,000 more is divided among the next five to finish.

VETERAN

Despite his age, Melika last year ran third in the 480-mile Indian marathon and hopes to be the winner this year. Mad Bull and Flying Cloud, who finished ahead of him in 1927, both are young enough to be his grandsons. The old fellow must have found a fountain of youth, for the pace is a hot one. The runners averaged 60 miles a day for eight days in last year's grind.

ENTRANT IN RACE

Whipple is one of the 40 Indians entered in the 480-mile marathon race from San Francisco to Grant's Pass, Ore., through the beautiful Redwood Empire for $10,000 in prizes, beginning June 14. The Indians are deeply religious and have invoked the aid of the gods of their fathers to give them strength and fleetness of foot to enable them to outrun their rivals. Whipple is shown above going through the ceremony.

LIGHT-HEAVY CHAMP DEFEATS LATZO

BROOKLYN, June 2.—(AP.)—Tommy Loughran, cagey ring general, last night warded off the wildest thrusts of Pete Latzo, once a champion himself in the welterweight realm, to hold tight to the light-heavyweight crown he must defend twice more this summer.

The Scranton coal miner might have won the championship of the 175 pounders if his swirling attack and long overhead swings had been confined into a space of 10 rounds. But against the Philadelphia ringmaster, rating the pace cleverly and saving his greatest efforts for the final rounds, Pete had little chance.

Tommy Loughran.

Even so, it was a final display of class and all-round ringmanship through the last five rounds, a final solving of the avenues that led to Latzo's iron chin and pudgy body, that brought Loughran home the winner, ready for Jimmy Slattery's brilliant attack on June 21 at the Polo Grounds. Pete could not meet the pace of those final rounds and the shade he earned through the first 10 sessions faded into semblance of a rout.

The Associated Press score sheet gave eight rounds to Loughran, five of them in a straight march to the final gong, while Pete won four of the first 10 and held the clean-cut champion even in three others.

Not until the closing rounds did Loughran discover that he must keep away from plush-covered rope boundaries of the ring to save the title. Then the all-round class of the champion took effect, Latzo's wild swings to the head and body slipped by where the leg room was ample in the center of the ring and Tommy cuffed the challenger into a tired but dogged plunger at the final bell.

The story was different in the early sessions. Loughran fell often into Latzo's trap and tried to fight the rugged challenger, who grew from the welterweights to the 175-pound class without even a stop-

DIES IN WORKOUT

HARRISON, N. J., June 2.—(INS.)—Adam Kaspar, Jr., 18, died from heart failure while practicing last evening for a track meet tomorrow.

Langley Evens Count

SCHENLEY HIGH failed in an effort to clinch the City Scholastic League baseball championship at Forbes Field last evening by dropping the second game of the play-off series to Langley by a 5-4 score.

Langley staged a fine comeback to win the second game after having dropped the opener on Tuesday, 11-1. Patsy Ragazzo was in splendid form, and held the Bellefielders safe in all but the third inning.

Bernie Buczek, Schenley's diminutive southpaw hurler, permitted but four safe hits, but they were bunched in the fourth inning, and coupled with some poor play on the part of Ochs, Schenley catcher, resulted in five runs.

Ochs permitted one of Buczek's pitches to get by him and allow the tying run to cross the plate and then he failed to catch a foul fly Ragazzo hit when Buczek was trying to give him a pass to increase the chances of a double play.

The third and deciding game will probably be played Tuesday afternoon at Forbes Field.

DOUBLES VICTORY NEEDED TODAY

CHICAGO, June 2.—(AP.)—Only three successive upsets can prevent Capt. William T. Tilden and his United States tennis team from entering the semi-finals for the Davis Cup in Europe this month.

Their victory in the American zone finals for the trophy was virtually assured yesterday when Tilden and Johnny Hennessey of Indianapolis swept the two opening singles matches with the Japanese stars, Tamio Abe and Yoshiro Ohta, in straight sets on the Chicago Town and Tennis Club hard clay courts.

Only one more match victory was necessary for the Americans of the three left and Capt. Tilden and George Lott of Chicago hoped to win that today when they paired in the doubles match with Abe and Capt. Teizo Toba. Two singles matches also remain to be played tomorrow, but a victory in today's doubles will make them a mere formality.

With a brisk wind swirling dust on the course, Tilden merely toyed with Abe in his singles match yesterday. He loafed along much as an instructor and when points were needed brought his back chopping stroke into play with deadly effect. At no time was he in danger of losing a set, while he had Abe racing to and fro almost as he willed for his deceptive returns.

Hennessey's task was a trifle harder. Ohta started out with a dazzling speed, taking three games in the first set before the Indianapolis star could get started. When he did unleash his powerful returns, however, he baffled Ohta, forcing him to double faults time and again and winning the set. From that time on he took comfortable leads at the start and easily won the remaining sets.

Tilden last night denied reports that Francis Hunter, who is now in France, has been dropped from the United States Davis Cup team. After reading press dispatches that Hunter had been dropped, Big Bill Davis Cup committee, who informed him the report was erroneous and that he was still in absolute charge of the American team.

MANAGER M'CARTHY OF CUBS ORDERED OFF FIELD

The hustling pilot of the Bruins held up the game at Forbes Field yesterday for several minutes arguing about a decision on a box play at third base on which Pete Scott of the Pirates was called safe, and Umpire Dolly Stark finally ordered him from the field and Umpire Ernie Quigley escorted him to the dugout. Coach Mickey Doolan continued the harangue and he also was ejected. McCarthy is at the extreme left in the picture. Today McCarthy received notice from President Heydler of the National League that he had been fined $100 for the incident.

FAIRWAY FIRST CHOICE FOR ENGLISH DERBY

EPSOM, Eng., June 2.—(AP.)—Lord Derby's bay colt, Fairway, has been made a heavy public favorite to capture the one hundred and forty-third running of the derby next Wednesday.

Odds on the Son of Phalaris-Scapa Flow are quoted at 5 to 2 against. Flamingo, winner of the 2,000 guineas, and second choice for the derby, is quoted at 6 to 1 against. The 21 other entries are quoted at odds ranging from 15 to 8 to 100 to 1 against.

aggressive catcher. Smart behind the plate, this boy carries a punch. He and Jimmy Wilson are winning a lot of ball games for their respective teams.

Rogers Hornsby had the baseball world agog until the Rhinelanders caught up with the rejuvenated Braves. George Sisler seems to have added to the Tribe; in Sisler, Hornsby, Farrell and Bell, the New England entry has one of the cleverest infields in the league.

PETE SCOTT is running over with natural baseball ability. He has those two much-wanted requisites—speed and punch—in his favor. There should be some position which Peter could fill. The word that he was weak against righthand pitchers is discounted by Scott, himself, and by many of his friends.

When Scott joined the Pirates this spring he told the writer he was confident he could hit the righthanders as well as the southpaws if he were left in the battle over an extended period. His drives off Blake and Holly yesterday were as clean as anybody could desire.

SCOTT has taken care of 32 chances in his two games at first base. He is surehanded around the bag, and, like Joe Harris, he peps up the spirit of the other infielders.

Latzo's pawing tactics cut Loughran's chin in the second round and brought blood from his left eye and lips in the fifth session. Pudgy Pete showed only a bright red splotch above his left kidney at the close where Loughran had reached him with a stream of overhand rights in the last rounds.

The show brought about 15,000 of the faithful to Ebbets Field, home of the Brooklyn National League ball club, despite one postponement of the fight from Wednesday. Loughran scaled in at 173½ pounds, while Latzo weighed 168.

HOW BASEBALL'S STARS TWINKLED YESTERDAY

Paul Waner — Doubled once in three times at bat to drive in a run and help the Pirates to defeat the Cubs.

Rogers Hornsby—Doubled once in three times at bat.

Harry Heilman—Failed to get a hit in four times at bat, but his team won.

Kiki Cuyler—Was not in the lineup as the Cubs lost to the Pirates.

Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig—Took part in an exhibition game, both failing to make a hit.

Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker—Along with the Athletics, had a day off.

SOX TOP DES MOINES

DES MOINES, June 2.—(AP.)—Scoring 11 runs on as many hits plus nine local errors, the Chicago White Sox defeated Des Moines' Western League club in an exhibition baseball game here yesterday, 11 to 5.

CESARONE GETS INTO FINALS

CHICAGO, June 2.—(AP.)—William Cesarone of the South Brownsville, Pa., track and field team, easily qualified in the discus throw in the preliminaries of the University of Chicago interscholastic track and field meet yesterday. The qualifying distance for the discus throw was 105 feet.

G. Vance of the Greensburg, Pa., High School qualified in the preliminary heats of the 120-yard high hurdles, but failed to place in the semi-final.

Athletes from Fort Collins, Col., qualified heavily in the preliminaries and are the favorites to win the national title in the finals. Eight hundred athletes representing 200 high schools from 24 states are in the competition.

HELEN WILLS VICTOR

AUTEUIL, France, June 2.—(AP.)—Helen Wills advanced to the semi-final round of the international hard court championships today by defeating Rollin Couquerque, Dutch champion, in straight sets.

Miss Wills won with ease by scores of 6-2, 6-0.

The victory, which carried Helen to the semi-finals, was the easiest she has won in the tournament. Her opponent was suffering from a severe case of stage fright and was no match for the American champion, although with her powerful physique she was able to put great pace behind the ball in her intermittent attempts to rally.

ENTRY LIST CLOSES FOR MILITARY MEET

The entry list closes today for the military track and field meet to be hed at the Pitt stadium next Saturday under the auspices of the local units of the Pennsylvania National Guard.

A large number of well known athletes are already entered for the open events, and the military championships will bring together all the stars from the 176th. Field Artillery, the 107th. Field Artillery, the 103rd. Signal Company and the 103rd. Medical regiment.

The Pittsburgh Athletic Association, the Westinghouse Club, Westinghouse High School, Pittsburgh & Lake Erie R. R. A. A., and other organizations have entries, and other organizations are expected to come through before the list closes.

The meet is an unique one, inasmuch as in connection with it the 176th. Field Artillery will be reviewed by city, county and state officials.

OAKLAND Y MEET TODAY

The annual Oakland Inter-Church track and field meet will be staged this afternoon at the Carnegie Tech Bowl. Entries have been divided into five classes, giving boys of different weight an equal chance for honors.

ROUNDTABLE of BUSINESS

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE majority of steel companies operating in the Pittsburgh district are expected to show substantially better earnings in the present quarter than they reported for the quarter ended March 31. Since last fall most branches of the steel industry have experienced a fairly steady improvement. A costly period of declining prices started early in 1927 and culminated last October. The prices of bars and shapes fell to 1.75 cents a pound, which was $5 a ton below the levels at the beginning of the year. Since then prices have been slowly pushed upward. Bars, plates and shapes were advanced $1 a ton to 1.80 cents a pound in the latter part of 1927. Early this year a further advance of $1 was made. Another increase of $1 a ton, making the price 1.90 cents a pound, has been made for third quarter business.

SEVERAL months are usually required for new steel prices to have any noticeable effect on earnings. Large consumers generally place orders for their requirements for a considerable time just prior to the making of price advances. This resulted in some tonnage being shipped at the bottom price levels in the first quarter of this year and some shipments being made at 1.80 cents during the present quarter.

HIGHER prices and improved operations were reflected to some extent in the first quarter of this year, but the benefits of a larger return per ton of steel shipped will have more marked results in the present three-month period.

SOME seasonal decline in output has been shown in recent weeks, but this has not been abnormally large. Ingot production is now at about 75 per cent of capacity compared with operations of 85 per cent a few months ago. Further curtailment may be shown in the next few weeks. Better prices, however, are more than compensating for any seasonal decline through which the industry is now passing.

PRICES at which bars, plates and shapes are being delivered are at the same level as prevailed at this time last year. Operations are equal to a year ago and in some cases greater. It seems likely that earnings in the present quarter will compare favorably with the second quarter of 1927, but in many cases they will not be as great due to the carryover of orders at lower prices in the present period.

AN attempt to advance bars, plates and shapes $1 a ton to 1.90 cents a pound last February was not successful, but producers will achieve a higher price level when third quarter orders are booked. The third quarter is usually a good one in volume of business, which makes it quite likely that the maintenance of higher quotations will be possible and further improvement in earnings will be shown.

THIS analysis of probable earnings to be expected for the second and third quarter will only be true of the large producers whose output is centered on the production of bars, shapes and plates. Mills engaged in other fields of steel production will be affected by condition in their particular lines.

WEAKNESS has been shown in sheet prices recently. Present quotations are from $1 to $2 a ton lower than a year ago. Sheet mills are operating at about 78 per cent of capacity.

TIN plate producers are running at 90 per cent of capacity. Prices are firm. A large pack of fruits and vegetables is expected this year with a corresponding demand for tin plate for cans. Tin plate is quoted at $5.25 a base box against $5.50 a year ago. It is difficult to determine how much of a reduction in price this actually amounts to on tin plate shipped to large makers of cans. It is known that these preferred customers secure special consideration in prices, but the extent of this is a mystery.

STRIPS are moving in fairly good volume. Production is at 75 per cent to 85 per cent of capacity. Prices of hot rolled strips have been unsatisfactory, but quotations on cold rolled strips are firm. The benefit of better quotations are being shown this quarter, but this branch of the steel industry has not fully recovered from the drastic reductions in prices in 1927 and 1926, which compelled many producers to show losses.

PIPE mills are working at 60 per cent of capacity. Prices are fairly satisfactory, but demand is poor, due to the depressed condition of the oil industry, which has been suffering from overproduction with no immediate outlook for improvement.

PIG IRON and scrap prices have declined during the last month. Merchant pig iron producers have had little chance to show profits during the last three years. Many of the blast furnaces now operating are being kept running solely to liquidate investments in ore properties.

WITH the connecting of a 2,200-volt transmission line and the closing of a switch yesterday a new industry for the Pittsburgh district was born. The Pittsburgh Generator Company, Inc., has placed the first calcium carbide plant in Pennsylvania in operation.

The Pittsburg Generator Company has been producing acetylene gas at its factory in McKeesport for seven years. Carbide is the raw material from which the gas is manufactured. The addition to the plant completely rounds out operations. Part of the carbide will be consumed for gas production and the remainder will be sold.

CONTRACTS already made and inquiries assure the sale of the entire output of the new plant from the start of operations. Initial production will be 3 p. m. tomorrow.

THE new development is of importance to the Duquesne Light Company since it supplies a continuous power load which will show little variation through the entire 24 hours of the day, a type of business which reduces the proportion of time during which generating equipment must remain idle. The power requirements of the plant will be greater than those for lighting the entire city of McKeesport.

THE carbide is produced in an electric furnace which is the largest equipment of its type in Pennsylvania. The furnace is cylindrical in shape and open at the top. Coke and lime are shoveled in and the heat generated by arcs between three enormous electrodes carrying out the chemical process at a temperature of 8,000 degrees Fahrenheit, the highest temperature used in any industrial process in Pennsylvania.

PRODUCE MARKET

Trading at the local wholesale produce district for all lines of fruit and vegetables was dull today. All fruit and vegetables were sold at about unchanged quotations.

Poultry supplies were liberal and the market was easy. The movement was rather slow and the quotations were about unchanged.

The egg market was about steady. Cheese and butter were steady. No change was made in the quotations on these markets.

Pear lot supplies were heavy, a total of 755 cars being on track. Included in the arrivals were 6 cars of apples, 1 beets, 8 cabbage, 17 cantaloupes, 2 celery, 3 cucumbers, 9 lettuce, 4 oranges, 1 peppers, 19 potatoes, 1 strawberries, 34 sweet potatoes, 11 tomatoes and 1 watermelons.

Dillon's Dodge Move Wise; Public Unloads Few Stocks

By B. C. FORBES

WHEN Clarence Dillon bought Dodge Brothers for $146,000,000, three years ago, he financed its flotation on a basis which left him in control. My own impression at the time was that it would have been wiser for him not to make himself entirely responsible for the actual management and operation of the business. His sale of the whole Dodge enterprise to Walter P. Chrysler must be regarded as wise.

It is important, when a banker sells to the public a large amount of securities of a corporation, that he should have a representative or representatives on the board of directors in order to keep close touch on how the money supplied by the public is being used. After all, a high grade banker who induces investors to put their money into a concern feels a sense of responsibility and is anxious to do everything within his power to contribute to successful results.

But banking is the business of a banker. Managing and operating this, that and the next type of industrial or utility or mining or transportation enterprise is not a banking function.

WHAT Clarence Dillon and his partners of Dillon, Read & Co. achieved in raising Goodyear from the slough of depression and bankruptcy to a state of prosperity doubtless influenced him to follow the course he did follow in the case of Dodge Brothers. But, obviously, each enterprise a banker undertakes to operate eats into his time and attention, leaving him less freedom and opportunity to conduct his normal banking operations successfully.

J. P. Morgan & Co. have raised many millions of dollars for various big companies, both railway and industrial, but while they have seen to it that they were properly represented on directorates, they have never, so far as I know, undertaken to operate such enterprises. Mr. Dillon and his house have become such tremendously influential factors in investment finance, in underwriting and distributing securities, that the move just made is unquestionably wise, since it will leave them freer to carry on their large-scale banking activities.

POLITICS are still almost totally ignored by Wall Street. High-ups in the financial world, however, are not enthusiastic over the political trend. Unemployment and agricultural discontent, it is feared, may jeopardize the Republican victory which the financial East not so long ago confidently counted upon.

THE stock market has continued to exhibit remarkable resiliency. Thus far each collapse has been quickly followed by a vigorous rally. The bulls contend that whenever stocks slip back a few points, outside buying rushes in. So long as quotations can be prevented from collapsing violently, no avalanche of public selling is likely. But should a drop occur drastic enough to start public selling, then there is no telling how many millions of recently-recruited speculators would excitedly throw their holdings on the market.

This is no time, at least as I see it, for buying or holding stocks on margin. Some day something is likely to happen somewhere—probably something entirely unforeseeable—which will abruptly end the speculative boom.

AGRICULTURAL banks, some of which got into disastrous straits, are now doing better. Encouraging developments were reported at a conference in Washington between executives of joint stock land banks and members of the Federal Farm Loan Board. Eugene Meyer, Jr., farm loan commissioner, gave assurance that joint stock land banks are no longer to be treated as step-children in the farm loan system. He urged these banks and federal land banks to lay aside their differences and join in a wholesale effort to forward sound and helpful agricultural banking and financing.

AGRICULTURAL conditions are rapidly improving throughout the country, reports submitted show. Mr. Meyer declared that the board felt the crisis in the joint stock land banks was passed and that all of the banks would be restored to health, including those now in receivers' hands—good news for stockholders, some of which purchased because of representations that they were buying "government" securities when, as a matter of fact, they were not. It was urged that hereafter such securities be not represented as semi-governmental obligations, but sold strictly upon their merits. However, thoroughgoing governmental supervision is desired by the Joint Stock Land Bankers' Association.

The right kind of banking and financing services, including, perhaps, governmental aid for co-operative marketing organizations, will do more in the long run for the permanent good of our farmers than McNary-Haugenism. Self-help is better than even a many-millioned sop.

JUNE promises to bring reasonably good business.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, June 2. — Rainless skies Northwest and Liverpool quotations higher than due gave the wheat market here an early swing upward today. Southwest reports that harvesting was in progress failed to act as an offset. Opening 4c to 1½c higher, Chicago wheat afterward scored additional gains. Corn and oats were also firmer, with corn starting ¼c to 1¼c up, and subsequently holding near to the initial rates. Provisions tended to sag.

Accompanying today's information of unfavorable weather conditions in spring wheat territory, reports were received telling of crop deterioration. According to dispatches sent by a leading crop expert from Clark, S. D., the deterioration in that section is rapid, except where local showers occurred 10 days ago and even these strips are becoming very dry, with the greater part of the acreage turning yellow.

Another week without rainfall in the South Dakota region referred to would about finish the small grain crop, today's messages said. It was added that much wheat is being plowed up or diced to make room for corn, but that the soil is so dry the corn will not germinate.

The following grain quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

COUNTY OF ALLEGHENY PENNSYLVANIA NOTICE OF SPECIAL ELECTION of the County of Allegheny, Pennsylvania, ON INCREASE OF INDEBTEDNESS

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to the electors of the County of Allegheny, Pennsylvania, in pursuance and by authority of resolutions duly adopted at regular meetings of the Board of County Commissioners of Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, held on the 23rd and 24th days of May, 1928, that a special public election will be held on Tuesday, the 26th Day of June, 1928, between the hours of 7 A. M. and 7 P. M., Eastern Standard Time, at the usual polling places for holding municipal elections in said County of Allegheny, for the purpose of obtaining the assent of the electors of the County of Allegheny to various increases in the indebtedness of the County as hereinafter set forth.

STATEMENT

The amount of the last preceding assessed valuation of the taxable property in the County of Allegheny is Two Billion Four Hundred Thirty-four Million, Six Hundred Fifty-two Thousand, Five Hundred Fifty ($2,434,652,550.00) Dollars.

The amount of the existing debt of the County of Allegheny is Fifty-seven Million Nine Hundred Seven Thousand, Seven Hundred Forty-seven and 69-100 ($57,907,747.69) Dollars.

The total amount of all proposed increases in the debt of the County of Allegheny is Forty-three Million, Six Hundred Eighty-Thousand ($43,680,000.00) Dollars.

The percentage of the total amount of such proposed increases to the last preceding assessed valuation of the taxable property in the County of Allegheny is one and seven hundred ninety-five thousandths minus per centum (1.795%).

The amounts of the proposed increases in indebtedness of the County of Allegheny and the purposes for which the indebtedness is to be increased, are set forth in the following questions, which will be submitted to the electors of the county at said election, namely:

QUESTION NO. 1

Shall the indebtedness of the County of Allegheny be increased in the amount of Six Million Five Hundred Fifty Thousand ($6,550,000.00) Dollars, for the purpose of paying the cost, damage, and expense, including engineering expense, or Allegheny County's share thereof, of locating, relocating, opening, widening, extending, altering, building, improving, making, constructing and reconstructing public roads and highways, in the county; and for the purpose of paying the county's share of the cost of the elimination of grade crossings; and for the elimination of dangerous curves on highways; and also for providing safety barriers on sharp curves and dangerous places on the highways; and for the purpose of joining with municipalities in constructing and improving highways, and undertaking joint improvements in conjunction therewith; and for the further purpose of acquiring property and rights of property in connection with any of the foregoing improvements to the highways of Allegheny County?

The percentage of the increase in indebtedness set forth in said Question No. 1 to the assessed valuation of the taxable property in the County of Allegheny is two hundred sixty-nine thousandths plus of one per centum (.269+%).

QUESTION NO. 2

Shall the indebtedness of the County of Allegheny be increased in the amount of Ten Million Nine Hundred Thirty Thousand ($10,930,000.00) Dollars, for the purpose of paying the cost, damage and expense, including architectural and engineering expenses, or Allegheny County's share thereof, of locating, relocating, opening, widening, extending, altering, building, improving, making, constructing and reconstructing public roads and highways in the County, including the necessary bridges, tunnels, viaducts, culverts and connections, as part thereof, and the acquirement of property and rights of property in connection therewith, said highways and the amounts for each being as follows, viz:

NO. 303.

AN ORDINANCE — Regulating cosmetic, physical culture, therapeutic parlors and schools, providing for inspection and licensing thereof and licensing of operators and owners therein, and providing for violations thereof.

Section 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same. That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation owning, controlling, leasing, acting as agent for, conducting, operating or managing any cosmetic, physical culture, therapeutic parlor or school in the City of Pittsburgh, to conduct or operate the same or cause or permit the same to be conducted or operated without first applying to and receiving from the Department of Public Health a license as herein provided.

Section 2. For the purpose of this Ordinance, a cosmetic, physical culture, therapeutic establishment or school is herewith defined to mean any building, room, place, establishment where any hairdressing, beauty culture, manicuring and facial massage are carried on or taught, or where physical culture, electric, hermic or other physical, therapeutic or cosmetic treatments are given by employes outside of a regularly licensed hospital or dispensary. No provision of this Ordinance shall be applicable to barbers or barber shop owners.

Section 3. Every applicant for such license shall file with the Department of Public Health a written application, which shall state the name and residence of the applicant, the street and number where such business or school shall be conducted, the character of business to be conducted and such other information as the Department of Health may require.

Section 4. The Department of Public Health shall thereupon cause the matters set forth in such application to be investigated, including the sanitary conditions of the place proposed to be operated.

Section 5. If such application be approved, a license shall be granted by the Director of the Department of Public Health provided the applicant shall first exhibit to him a receipt from the City Treasurer of the inspection fee hereinafter fixed, and, provided further that such license may be suspended or revoked upon the conviction of the holder thereof or his employe or agent of a violation of this Ordinance or any law of the State of Pennsylvania.

Section 6. The annual owner's license fee shall be Five (5.00) Dollars for each establishment employing not more than two persons, and One ($1.00) Dollar for each additional person employed in such establishments.

The number of employes shall be computed on the average daily number of persons employed during the preceding calendar year and shall be inclusive of the manager or proprietor and exclusive of the cashier and office employes.

All licenses shall expire on the Thirty-first day of December of the year in which they were granted.

Section 7. Every operator engaged in the business or school referred to in Section 1 hereof shall first, before being permitted to do so, file with the Department of Public Health a written application stating the applicant's name and residence and such other information as the Department of Public Health may require.

Every operator, before being granted a license, shall file with the Director of the Department of Public Health a Certificate signed by a qualified physician, licensed in the State of Pennsylvania, and also a receipt from the City Treasurer showing the payment of a fee of Two ($2.00) Dollars for the current year or part thereof. Such license shall be granted only after investigation by the/Department of Public Health of the matters set forth in such application and also only for such parlor or school as shall comply with the terms of this Ordinance, and which shall be licensed as herein provided for.

Such operator's license shall expire on the Thirty-first day of December of the year in which same is granted.

Section 8. All licenses herein provided for shall be renewed on or before the Fifteenth day of December of each year, provided the same be approved by the Director of the Department of Public Health and upon payment of the fees herein provided for.

Section 9. No person shall work as an apprentice in such beauty parlor or school without first making application therefore to the Department of Public Health, stating the name and residence of the applicant and location of the parlor or school, and any other information required by the Department of Public Health. Such apprentice must pass the physical examination required in Section 6, and shall be not less than sixteen years of age. No fee shall be paid by such apprentice, but the permit shall be subject to suspension or revocation as provided for in Section 4.

Every apprentice must work under the direct supervision of the licensed operator and will not be eligible for an operator's license until after six months' training and experience in a licensed cosmetic, physical culture, therapeutic establishment or school.

Section 10. (a) No operator or apprentice shall give a general body massage to a person of the opposite sex.

(b) All cosmetic, physical culture, therapeutic parlors and schools shall keep their tools, appliances and equipment in a sanitary condition including proper sterilization.

(c) The use of styptic pencils, alum blocks or other solid styptics is prohibited for stopping the flow of blood.

(d) No person affected with any disease of the skin or scalp shall have his or her hair cut or face treated in any such parlor or school.

AN ORDINANCE—Amending Section 20 of an Ordinance entitled, "An Ordinance regulating the construction, arrangement, alteration, repair, equipment and operation of elevators, in the City of Pittsburgh; providing for the remedying of dangerous and unsafe conditions in and about elevators; providing for the issuance, refusal and revocal of permits for the construction, arrangement, maintenance, alteration, repair, equipment and operation of elevators; providing for the inspection of all elevators in the City of Pittsburgh and defining for the purposes hereof all elevators and elevator machinery by classification according to use and power provided; and providing penalties for the violation of the provisions hereof," approved June 9, 1917, recorded in Ordinance Book Volume 28, Page 531.

Section 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same. That Section 20 of an Ordinance entitled, "An Ordinance regulating the construction, arrangement, alteration, repair, equipment and operation of elevators in the City of Pittsburgh; providing for the remedying of dangerous and unsafe conditions in and about elevators; providing for the issuance, refusal and revocal of permits for the construction, arrangement, maintenance, alteration, repair, equipment and operation of elevators; providing for the inspection of all elevators in the City of Pittsburgh and defining for the purpose hereof all elevators and elevator machinery by classification according to use and power provided, and providing penalties for the violation of the provisions hereof," approved June 9, 1917, be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 20. Thoroughfares shall not be allowed at all through shaftways of Class A elevators, provided, however, space for machinery and storage of all kinds may be provided below said shaftways; and provided further in such cases the pit construction shall be of ample strength and adequately supported to withstand, without injury, the impact of the car with rated load or the impact of the counterweight when either is descending at maximum speed or at governor tripping speed. The under clearance and pit depths of such elevators shall be as required for other elevator pits. Counterweights of such elevators shall be provided with safeties. There shall be installed a secondary or auxiliary device designed to stop the car, which device shall have been approved by the Bureau of Building Inspection of the Department of Public Safety of the City of Pittsburgh. The thoroughfares through the shaftways of freight elevators shall be protected by gates or doors not less than five feet six inches high which shall automatically close when the elevator leaves the thoroughfare landing and remain closed at all times when the elevator is away from the landing. Such elevator shaftway shall not be used as a thoroughfare except when the elevator is at the landing.

Section 2. That any Ordinance or part of Ordinance conflicting with the provisions of this Ordinance be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this Ordinance.

Passed in Council May 21, 1928.

NO. 305.

AN ORDINANCE—Granting unto S. Strunz and Sons, Inc., its successors and assigns, the right to construct, maintain and use a manhole and conduits under and across South Eighth street for the purpose of transmitting sodium silicate, caustic soda and vegetable oils from existing railroad siding on South Eighth street to the property of S. Strunz and Sons, Inc., Seventeenth Ward, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Section 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same. That S. Strunz and Sons, Inc., its successors and assigns be and are hereby given the right and authority at its own cost and expense to construct, maintain and use a manhole and two conduits, one 2" and one 3", under and across South Eighth street for a distance of 22.2', manhole to be constructed under present side track, said manhole and conduits located 39' north of Cabot way, for the purpose of transmitting sodium silicate, caustic soda and vegetable oils from tank cars to the property of S Strunz and Sons, Inc.

SAID MANHOLE and conduits shall be constructed in accordance with the provisions of this ordinance and in accordance with the plan hereto attached and identified as Assessment No. 1, Folder "B," in the files of the Division of Public Utilities, Bureau of Highways and Sewers, Department of Public Works, entitled, "Proposed manhole and conduits under and across South Eighth street for the S. Strunz and Sons, Inc., Seventeenth Ward, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Section 2. The said Company prior to beginning the construction of said manhole and conduits, shall submit to the Director of the Department of Public Works, for the said City a complete set of plans showing the location and all details for the construction of said manhole and conduits, and said plans and the construction of said manhole and conduits shall be subject to the approval and supervision of said Director.

Section 3. The rights and privileges herein granted shall be subject and subordinate to the rights of the City of Pittsburgh and its powers over City of Pittsburgh relating thereto, and to the provisions of any general Ordinance which may hereafter be passed, relating to the construction, maintenance and use of manhole and conduits in city streets and compensation for same.

Section 4. The said grantee shall bear the full cost and expense of the repaving and repair of the street pavement damaged, repair of sewers, water lines and other surface and sub-surface structures which may in any way be damaged or disturbed by reason of the construction maintenance and use of said manhole and conduits. All of the said work, including the repaving of the street damaged, shall be done in the manner and at such times as the Director may order, and shall be subject to his approval and supervision.

Section 5. The rights and privileges granted by this Ordinance are granted upon the express condition that the City of Pittsburgh, without liability, reserves the right to cause the removal of the said manhole and conduits, upon giving thirty (30) days notice through the proper officers pursuant to Resolution or Ordinance of Council to the said S. Strun and Sons, Inc., its successors and assigns, to that effect; and that the said grantee when so notified, shall at the expiration of the said thirty days, forthwith, remove the said manhole and conduits and replace the street to its original condition, at its own cost and expense.

Section 6. The said grantee shall assume any liability of the City of Pittsburgh for damages to persons or property, including the street and sub-surface structures therein, by reason of the construction, maintenance and use of the said manhole and conduits, and it is a condition of this grant that the City of Pittsburgh assumes no liability to either persons or property on account of this grant.

Section 7. The foregoing rights and privileges are granted subject to the following condition, to-wit: This Ordinance shall become null and void unless within thirty (30) days after its passage and approval, S. Strunz and Sons, Inc., shall file with the City Controller its Certificate of Acceptance of the provisions thereof, said Certificate to be executed by the said S. Strunz and Sons, Inc., with its corporate seal attached.

Section 8. That any Ordinance or part of Ordinance conflicting with the provisions of this Ordinance be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this Ordinance.

Passed in Council May 21, 1928.
Approved May 26, 1928.

IT IS TRUE — "MR X" DESERVES AN EXPLANATION — LET US BEND AN EAR AND HEAR FROM WILLIAM MORGAN DE BECK, CREATOR OF THE BILLY GOATS
OUT OF THE THOUSANDS AND THOUSANDS OF MEN WHOSE NAMES WERE SUBMITTED TO US FOR MEMBERSHIP IN THE BILLYGOATS, "MR X" IS THE ONLY ONE WHO HAS OBJECTED. MEN WHO ARE ALREADY FOLLOWERS OF THIS NATIONAL ORGANIZATION OF REGULAR FELLOWS SUBMIT TO US THE NAMES OF THEIR FRIENDS AND WE, IN TURN, MAKE THEM BILLYGOATS - "MR X'S" NAME WAS SENT TO US BY HIS VERY BEST FRIEND AND BELIEVING "MR X" TO BE AS GOOD A SCOUT AS THE GENTLEMAN WHO GAVE HIS NAME. WE PLACED HIM WITH THE OTHER BOYS WHO ARE ABOUT TO BE INITIATED - NO OFFENSE WAS INTENDED, OF COURSE. WE HONESTLY BELIEVED "MR X" TO BE THE KIND OF A MAN AND REGULAR FELLOW WE WANT IN OUR GREAT ORGANIZATION AND WE HOPE HE'LL CHANGE HIS MIND AND BECOME ONE OF US - DEBECK 6-2

A MYSTIC HEALER WHO INTENDED TO HYPNOTIZE GEORGE BUNGLE INTO FORGETTING RELATIVES, WAS SO REMARKABLY SUCCESSFUL THAT GUSTAVE BROWN, NOW OF NEW BABYLON, REMEMBERS NO REASON WHY HE SHOULD NOT BE TOO FANCY FREE WITH THE YOUNG LADY WHO MISTAKENLY IDENTIFIED HIM AS HER FIANCE
YES SUH! YESTERDAY WAS THE THIRD TIME THAT LITTLE GIRL BUSTED OUT CRYING WHEN I ASSURED HER MY NAME ISN'T DON ALFERDO. AND HOW THOSE DARK EYES FLASHED WHEN SHE STAMPED HER LITTLE FOOT AND CALLED ME A BRUTE. AND HOW! WELL I POSITIVELY WILL NOT MIX INTO OTHER PEOPLE'S AFFAIRS BUT ANY MAN WHO SNEERS AT A LITTLE LADY WHO I SUPPOSE HAS NO ONE TO PROTECT HER, ISN'T A MAN, THAT'S ALL.
WELL IF SHE NEEDS HELP OR ADVICE FROM ME SHE'LL GET IT. WHY SHOULD I BE NARROW-MINDED ABOUT THIS AFFAIR SIMPLY BECAUSE THAT POOR LITTLE GIRL HAS MISTAKEN ME FOR SOMEONE ELSE? MY WORD, WHAT A DIZZY THOUGHT!
DELORES CASTANET! SHE PROBABLY KNOWS NOTHING ABOUT THE WORLD. SHE PROVED THAT WHEN SHE RUSHED UP TO ME AS I GOT OFF THE TRAIN AND THREW THAT PAIR OF CHUBBY ARMS AROUND MY NECK AND BURST INTO TEARS OF GLADNESS. DELORES CASTANET! I WONDER WHERE SHE LIVES AND IF SHE LIKES FLOWERS?

TO ALL MEMBERS OF THE "JUST KIDS" SAFETY CLUB:
I have just completed three months of very strenuous work on the "Just Kids" Safety Club, and the response from all kids, old and young, has been most gratifying. I know you will be glad to hear that the Club has well over a million members throughout the United States, Canada, and New Zealand. It has undoubtedly saved the lives of many youngsters, judging from the reports of this year, compared with those of last. I wish that I could personally meet every member and the parents of each member.
There will be no further direct mention of the Club in this cartoon until next spring, so in the meantime don't forget your pledge: "REMEMBER TO LOOK UP AND DOWN BEFORE YOU CROSS THE STREET!"
And now may I wish you all happiness and safety until we get together again!
Sincerely,

THERE'S THAT GUY, NESOR, WITH MY DAUGHTER AGAIN - I NEVER SAW HER SO INTERESTED IN ANYONE BEFORE AND SHE DON'T EVEN KNOW WHO HE IS - I'LL SPEAK TO HER ABOUT THIS.
MISS BLACK, I WOULDN'T BE SO INTERESTED IN THIS FELLOW, NESOR, UNTIL I KNEW SOMETHING MORE ABOUT HIM - HE DON'T LOOK GENUINE TO ME.
MR. FLINT, WHEN I SEEK YOUR ADVICE I WILL BE THANKFUL FOR IT, BUT UNTIL THEN CONSIDER THIS AFFAIR MY OWN - BESIDES FROM WHAT I GATHER OF YOUR PAST, YOU NEVER SOILED A HYMN BOOK.
I WONDER IF I TOLD HER I WAS HER FATHER, WOULD SHE SPEAK TO ME LIKE THAT - WELL, I WROTE TO GET A LINE ON THIS BIRD AND IF I FIND HE'S A COUNTERFEIT, I'LL TAKE HIM OUT OF CIRCULATION.
WE HAVE BEEN WONDERING IF FLINT SHOULD TELL MISS BLACK THAT HE'S HER FATHER.... WE WONDER IF SHE WOULD FORGIVE HIM. WHAT DO YOU THINK ABOUT IT?

Big Balloon Race Shows Thousands Airport Need

The balloon race had important local significance as well as being a demonstration along scientific lines from which experts doubtless will extract much that is valuable as a guide in future contests of the kind. Laymen, we can leave that to them as we consider the benefit to our own community.

That lies in its effect as propaganda in behalf of the proposed airport, which is among the projects listed in the county bond issue which will come before the voters for approval Tuesday, June 26. It is estimated that approximately 175,000 persons were in the vicinity of Bettis Field when the balloons took off. The spectators saw many things besides the big gas bags—airplanes, the great dirigible—the Los Angeles—and a demonstration of the use of the parachute. Truly, an all-embracing exposition of aerial progress.

These thousands of persons hardly could have failed to be impressed by the concrete evidence before them of the need of an appropriate airport for the furtherance of commercial expansion of aerial transportation. Air mail, express and passenger service will be a fact far beyond our present conception before we realize it, and we must be prepared.

A far-sighted man is Henry Ford. His vision enabled him to dominate the automobile field for years. He again looks into the future and is now prepared to take the same position in aerial transportation. Don't you think that is significant?

Interest in the bond issue is spreading rapidly. The North Side Chamber of Commerce has invited county commissioners to outline the various proposals at its meeting this week. The West End Board of Trade has gone on record by indorsing the loan in its entirety.

Credit Belongs Here for Vote Machine Amendment

Pittsburgh has accomplished another big thing in the line of progress, this being the status of the voting machine amendment to the constitution, which will be voted on in November. It could be said with justice that Pittsburgh fathered and has furthered the cause.

The late State Senator John P. Harris first presented the amendment at the extraordinary session of the legislature in 1926. He was succeeded by his brother, Senator Frank J. Harris, who made the amendment his particular interest. Adopted by the Legislature it now comes before the public with the indorsement of Pittsburgh civic and commercial organizations as well as local political bodies.

What Do You Make of Him?

Is He Our Relative?

HERE HE IS—LOOK AT HIM

This is one of four young chimpanzees recently seen in London's Zoological Garden. Look at him, study him without prejudice. Does his HUMAN look surprise you? Does it indicate, as Darwinians suggest, a more or less close relationship with the human race? Or is it just an accident?

Was this "funny face," included among the creatures in the Garden of Eden, made to amuse little Cain and Abel as they grew up? Or is this face, with its strange suggestion of human features, a product of what science calls "evolution"?

Darwin, you know, NEVER SAID THAT MEN DESCEND FROM MONKEYS. He said all animals came from animals of an inferior form, through evolution, a process of change, lasting through millions of years.

He did not believe that monkeys were our ancestors and never said so. But he thought that monkeys, including this chimpanzee, were closely related to some other animal form from which men did descend.

You may see among certain savage tribes of human beings faces NOT much more human than this one.

Science will tell you that the number of bones in this animal's body is the same as in our own, and the bones answer the same purposes. The blood of this strange creature is like our blood.

"Ah!" you will say, "but I have a soul and this chimpanzee has none. Don't talk to me about him." Quite right, each is entitled to his own opinion.

Perhaps, for that matter, we should be flattered if we knew what this chimpanzee thinks as he looks at us and wonders that we make so little use of our possibilities.

Live Forever

That's the Advice for Mussolini

Mussolini, working to make Fascist government perpetual, will find it hard to make anything take the place of combined personality and will power.

An important editor, asking how his newspaper could be made a permanent institution, was told by a friend: "It's simple enough, live forever."

That is the answer to Mussolini. When HE goes, nobody knows what will happen. Meanwhile he plays a great world part and has carried Italy through dangerous years.

War brings lassitude, drifting, and weaknes old ideals. Mussolini stopped all that, in Italy.

New York Day by Day

NEW YORK, June 2.—This is the story of the return of a woman to her native America after living for years the life of an adventuress in European capitals. Thoroughly disillusioned and with the bloom of beauty fading, she landed with a total capital of $2.

Her amours and amourettes have long been topical all over the continent, and she has written of them in American magazines. One fortune after another was wasted in profligacy, but always she was able to find another millionaire.

But in the last year or so she appeared to have fallen on gaunt days, and became somewhat of a hanger on around the little circular bars of Paris where Americans gather. Finally she decided to spend the sunset days in her own country.

A faithful maid of the more opulent past accompanied her. In a week the matter of a hotel bill became so pressing her presence became known through a newspaper story of her debt. Her plight stirred the ashes of a dead love. In the mail came a thousand-dollar bill.

That was the beginning of the mutual admiration society formed by several former admirers. They clubbed together and rented a fine old home in the East Sixties, completely redecorating and refurnishing it in magnificent fashion.

In gratitude her home has become a private rendezvous for many old flames where they may bring friends for dinner, bridge or a little social drinking. She is queening it as hostess as she did in the days of her villas and town houses.

Famous literary figures drop into her salon now and then for a cup of coffee or smile sirup and an exchange of gossip. Her maison has become smart because it is ultra. And she is an illustrious example of hard-boiled New York's sentimentality.

Across the portals of a Forty-fourth street hotel's hat check room is "No tip, please." This has been there for years and is likely the only tipless gesture that has not cracked under the strain.

The costliest bath of the week was that of a hotel patron who fell asleep in the tub with water running and was aroused with news that not only his apartment had been flooded but the one below him, too, at a cost of $2,500. Some birds should never be allowed in a bathroom without a plumber within call.

Souvenir snatchers pack silverware and other mementos valued at a half million from ocean liners yearly, according to steamship agencies. The idea of stamping "This was stolen" on silverware increased the thefts, because it added a touch of gaiety to purloining. Incidentally, it is said steamship rates would be lower if it were not for this practice. And that excuse is as good as any.

It is interesting, too, that souvenirs are rarely carried off by passengers in second class.

* * *

Broadway can always go fictional imagination one better. One of the White Way's high flinging millionaires whose hectic parties are still a memory is now in a sanitarium babbling and quite mad. Most of his time is spent at a dead telephone talking to former loves of Broadway.

* * *

The famous old Knickerbocker Grill was the latest to succumb to what Sime of Variety calls Broadway's Yellow Peril—and go Chinese. It is now one of the Chinese sort that continues to give Broadway more and more of the old Chinatown glamor. Churchill's old restaurant stand has gone Chink and a block away an entire corner has been torn down for a new building which will add another link in the chain.

* * *

I have always believed the amazing success of the Chinese cafe is due to the universal love of mystery. Nothing is so mysterious as a big bowl of chop suey.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

The Self-Regenerating Universe

IF EVER the interplanetary rocket-train carries human beings into space beyond the earth, the voyagers will behold a marvelous, though momentary, vision of blue changing to black as they pass through and out of the earth's atmosphere. The exquisite cerulean ceiling that canopies the lower world will darken until suddenly the whole heavens will become a pall of jet-black velvet sprinkled with untwinkling diamond points, each an infinitesimal, but piercingly bright, core of pure incandescence.

Uncovered, unprotected, alone, exposed, naked as it were to infinite space, these adventurers will be buffeted by the storm of cosmic rays that rages, unperceived by our human senses on the earth, through those illimitable depths.

They will be in the immediate presence of eternal creative energy, the universal cradle of all matter and of life that is linked with matter. Such at least is the vision suggested by the latest discoveries concerning the most mysterious of physical phenomena, the "cosmic rays," investigated by Millikan during the last few years and often called by his name.

With his assistant, Cameron, he has lately discovered that these rays, which come through the atmosphere with sufficient penetrative power left to pass to a depth of 200 feet in a pure mountain lake, are divisible, like light, into a spectrum consisting of bands having definite vibration frequencies.

In this light spectrum the different frequency bands correspond with certain colors, such as red, yellow, green, blue; in the spectrum of the cosmic rays the frequency bands, of which four have so far been found, mark virbations which, by the Einstein theory of the relation of mass to energy, should be given off during the creation of helium from hydrogen, of oxygen from hydrogen, of nitrogen from hydrogen, and of iron from hydrogen.

An enormous amount of energy is assumed to be locked up in the nucleus of the hydrogen atom, where it appears in the form of mass. The hydrogen nucleus, although of almost infinitesimal size, is relatively the heaviest thing in existence. Practically the entire mass of a hydrogen atom is in the nucleus. But when the more complex atom of helium is formed out of hydrogen a certain amount of mass, or matter, is lost, or goes off in the form of vibrations of the ether.

Proportionate amounts of matter are transformed into vibrations in the formation of the still more complex atoms of oxygen, nitrogen, iron and the other elements. These vibrations radiating in all directions through space constitute the "cosmic" rays which probably originate in the stars and nebulae, and perhaps in other unknown sources in the universe.

Thus the discovery of Millikan and Cameron is regarded as the first evidence that has ever been obtained that there exists in the universe a "building-up process" which results in replacing the "tearing-down process" shown by the phenomena of radio-activity. With some reserve, say the discoverers, and subject to further critical analysis, the cosmic rays may be taken as "announcements broadcast through the heavens of the birth of the ordinary elements out of positive and negative electrons."

This is a confirmation by science of the age-long faith that the universe is re-creative in its nature. Its law is eternal change, not tending to extinction.

Elocution

CANDIDATES for high office would be wise to begin voice culture soon. Not the kind that builds a bellowing roar or goes with the practice of gesticulation before a mirror.

The radio has ended all that. Its prizes are for the speaker who can enunciate clearly, put his thoughts over with a certain cadence and—most important of all—have something to say.

People at mass meetings, reacting to mob fervor, may once have endured spread-eagle ranting. But no man or woman, in the privacy of homes, will turn the dial for it.

This coming campaign will develop a new technique in public speaking. It will mark the beginning of a revival of intelligent elocution.

Tired Feeling

DAILY you think yourself into a tired condition.

It is easy to let down and give way to a little feeling of weariness.

Giving the imagination a little leeway, and you believe that you are at the limit of your strength and endurance.

More than likely you are at the limit of your ambitions.

It is probable that every day, as you go home, you think of how tired and worn you are.

When you reach home you are convinced that you need a long rest or a tonic or a trip somewhere to recuperate, and not one thought have you given to the sour face with which you greet the family.

Why don't you try to add a little cheerfulness to the family circle?

Have you not noticed that when you get away from your work a little early to enjoy some pleasure, you don't feel tired, and you worked harder than usual in order to get away?

This ought to convince you that most of the tired feeling you experience is the result of encouraging your imagination, and it may be that your family has noticed it too, and that accounts for the lack of sympathy which you get at home on these tired nights.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

Satisfied

TOO much of praise is sometimes meant
When others call a man "content."
Content is good, and yet it seems
To spell forgetfulness of dreams,
And all bright wizardry of youth
When eager hearts go seeking truth.
What leads man on from goal to goal
Content? Not so the human soul
Has sought and conquered earth's far verge;
But driven ever by some urge
More dear than ease or peace or rest
Man vanquished sea and mountain crest,
And, soaring up on shining wing,
Has ventured where the planets swing.
Too often all man's best has died
When he is wholly satisfied.

Words of the Wise

The fear of death is worse than death.—Burton.

All work, even cotton-spinning, is noble; work is alone noble.—Carlyle.

The world is satisfied with words. Few appreciate the things beneath.—Pascal.

It is right for him who asks forgiveness for his offenses to grant it to others.—Horace.

And let these altars, wreathed with flowers
And piled with fruit, awake again
Thanksgivings for the golden hours,
The early and the later rain.

Tales that are Told

Warned

MEEKLEY made up his mind he was not going to be bossed any longer by his wife, so when he went home he called out, impatiently, "Laura! Laura!"

Mrs. Meekley came out of the kitchen with a bead of perspiration on the end of her nose, a dishrag over her shoulder, and a rollingpin in her hand.

"What do you want with Laura?" she asked.

Meekley staggered, but braced up.

"I want you to understand"—he tapped his breast dramatically—"that I am the engineer of this establishment, that I am—"

"Oh, you are, are you? Well, I want you to understand that I"—and she looked dangerous—"I am the boiler that might blow up and sling the engineer into the next street. Do you hear the steam escaping?"

He heard, and quickly got out of the way.

Making Quite Sure

MRS. VERE-HEARE, accompanied by her maid, went shopping one afternoon in an Oxford street draper's.

"I want to see some red georgette," said Mrs. Vere-Heare to the shingled maiden behind the counter.

After inspecting it closely she inquired whether it would wash nicely.

"Oh, yes, madam," declared the shop assistant promptly.

Mrs. Vere-Heare was dubious by nature. Seizing a pair of scissors, she clipped a small piece off the roll of material and passed it to her maid.

"Here you are, Jane," she said. "Chew that for a minute or two and see if the color comes out."—London Answers.

Not in His Line

THE black sheep of the family decided to emigrate and, not being able to raise sufficient funds, signed on as a stoker.

he job down in the stokehold, however, proved too much for him, and after working half a shift he bathed and changed and went on deck, where by sheer instinct he located the bar.

Not long afterwards the chief engineer discovered the culprit, and ordered him back to the stokehold.

"Oh, no jolly fear, old boy," was the reply "Didn't the chaps down in that ghastly place tell you I'd left?"—London Tit-Bits.

He Had Wronged Her

IT WAS the usual domestic storm.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" moaned the wife. "Why ever didn't I take my poor mother's advice and refuse to marry you?"

Her husband swung round on his heel, and at last found his voice.

"Did your mother try to stop you from marrying me?" he inquired.

The wife nodded violently.

A look of deep remorse crossed the angry man's face.

"Great Scott!" he cried. "How I wronged that woman!"

It Looked Real

A CELEBRATED soprano was singing a solo in the village hall when a very old villager turned to the man next to him and asked in an audible whisper: "Garge, whoi does that man keep on hittin' the girlie with his stick?"

His friend tried to explain.

"That's the conductor of the band," he began. "He's keeping time; he ain't hittin' her."

"Whoi, then," objected the old crony, "whoi is she hollerin'?"—London Answers.

Historic

WHAT may be an historic action was taken by the Senate May 18. It unanimously voted $75,000 that the Public Health Service and the National Academy of Sciences may tell the government what, if anything, it can do to check the spread of cancer.

Cancer each year takes away more than 125,000 Americans and its toll is growing. The yearly cost in money of its havoc in this country is reckoned at eight hundred million dollars.

Congress last year voted $10,000,000 to exterminate the corn borer, but has never directly spent a cent on cancer. Senator Neely's bill proposing this inquiry was the first on record.

It is a good sign when legislatures begin to consider human welfare in terms of health.

Life and the Human Body

By DR. FRANK CRANE

We know that life on this planet is the functioning of an organism that assimilates food and breathes air in some way or another. This includes men, birds, fishes, reptiles and plants.

Dr. Henry Norris Russell, director of Princeton University Observatory, said the other day that the only place on any other planet or heavenly body where life could exist, as we find it here, was probably the planet Mars, as that is the only planet we know that has the right range of temperature and also water, air and light.

All but 1,000 of the billions of known heavenly bodies are too hot for any life and out of the thousand there are only seven which come within the widest scope of requirements for life.

But there is a temperature of at least 100 degrees below zero on Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune. Life, as we understand it, may exist on Venus, although the range of temperature is unfavorable.

The trouble is that we do not know what life is. As far as we know, it is always connected with some air-breathing, nutriment-consuming organization.

But if, as some claim, life is a form of electricity, it might well function in some non-organic or mineral substance that could be electrified and neither breathe air nor consume food.

In other words, Dante's vision of souls inhabiting flames is not entirely impossible, and the souls of men here inhabiting human bodies might well go to inhabit mineral organizations somewhere else.

Science distinctly points to somewhere in the unknown where all elements can be resolved into one and the different elements are merely from different combinations of the electrons.

In the great heat of other stellar bodies electrons may function, the same electrons that operate here in our temperature, and somehow life may be a functioning of these electrons.

It is a pleasing fancy that God is using this earth as a breeding ground for souls and that from here they go out to populate the stars. In that case sex life would only exist here, being the medium of growing souls, while in heaven and on the heavenly bodies they would "neither marry nor be given in marriage," according to the Scripture.

Talking and Doing

MY address was Yokohama, Japan, on that tiptoe day when Dewey climbed into a permanent niche in history by destroying the Spanish fleet in Manila Bay without the loss of a ship or a man.

I boarded the flagship, the Olympia, while the fleet was parked temporarily in Yokohama Bay. Dewey missed an opportunity that day for he didn't have his picture taken standing at my side by the taffrail. Then away they went to the Philippines and soon came the famous order from Dewey: "You may fire when you are ready, Gridley."

No wonder Dewey was made the third Admiral of the Navy with only Farragut and Porter preceding him. And no wonder New York built an Arch of Triumph in his honor, and he was presented with a palatial residence in Washington and ultimately was buried with the highest public honors in Arlington Cemetery.

That Dewey-Manila chapter of history was enacted May 1, 1898, 30 years ago.

When the battle smoke had blown away and the telegraph had told its front page story, there grew up a little collateral, bi-product tale about the aforementioned Dewey.

The Chinamen began to say: "Spain is all talkee, talkee, but United States is all Dewey, Dewey!"

There are those silent coral island fellows who quietly build their atolls of beauty. How we admire them. They seldom come up for air. Only their wives know their addresses. You couldn't pull them out of their dens with a corkscrew nor into the public eye with Taurus and his mate. They are on the payroll of God as demonstrators of the virtue modesty. And they are the fulcra on which Archimedes rests his lever when he lifts the world.

Then there are the talkee, talkee folks whose loquacity silences the thunderings of Vesuvius and Pelee. They are the mountains who travail and bring forth mice or mole hills. Subtract what they are from what they think they are and only the microbe sleuth with his microscope could find any remainder.

Modern business likes the man who is short on promise and long on production. They soon learn that the man's word is some 1% per cent good; that if he lies at all it's on the side of modesty. For such a man everything to the President's chair or the Manager's office is greased and he slides up like a meteor going back home after a night out with a comet.

Thomas of Malmesbury said an office full when he uttered this:

"There is no action of man in this life which is not the beginning of so long a chain of consequences, as that no human providence is high enough to give us a prospect to the end."
